A bronze tribute to Louis Armstrong, unveiled yesterday in New Orleans.

Personalities

Susan Ford turned philosophical (Edith Piaf school), along with turning 19 years old today. "Men are a waste of time," she informed people at an early birthday celebration aboard the Presidential yacht Sequoia on Sunday. "You can't live with them and you can't live without them."

Ex-presidential daughter Julie Nixon Eisenhower turned 28 yesterday, but issued no statement on what to do about men, or anybody else. We don't know if she bore it philosophically, because she celebrated in San Clemente seclusion with her husband and parents.

Linda Strelczyk, a 33-year-old beautician, cleaned up at the Armadillo, Tex., fair this weekend, capturing the Miss Vacant Lot title and tying for first place in the Fat Is Beautiful contest.

Last year, she had been runner-up in the Miss Vacant Lot contest, losing out to a contestant who stuffed 300 pennies in her mouth. Her triumph this year was accomplished by stuffing 200 poptop tabs into her brassiere. However, the great victory was sharing the Fat Is Beautiful title with Judy Lynn Borgaar, 297 pounds — Strelczyk is only 215 pounds, not counting the poptops.

Betty Ford and Happy Rockefeller are being listed under their own names in the new Who's Who, the publishers of that enormous volume have announced. Previously, the two were listed only in the entries of their husbands, the First and Second Gentlemen of the land respectively.

An 11-foot Satchmo is standing in New Orleans now, the city where the jazz star, more formally known as Louis Armstrong, was born. The sculpture, which is by Elizabeth Catlett, was unveiled Sunday, on what would have been the musician's 76th birthday.

Farley Granger, the film actor, has become an instant psychiatrist and a patriarch in "One Life to Live," the ABC soap opera which goes from a half-hour to a three-quarter-hour daily format on July 26. Granger has the role of Dr. Will Vernon, head of an entirely new family to be introduced on the serial.
