Mrs. Ford arrives at the course at 12:30 p.m. and, at 12:50 p.m., you join the other guests on the Clubhouse veranda for luncheon. (See schedule for list of attendees.) You will arrive back at the residence at approximately 2:15 p.m. At 2:50 p.m., you will depart the residence by motorcade for Monterey Peninsula Airport where you will board Air Force One en route Moffett Field Naval Air Station, Palo Alto, California. You will proceed from Moffett to the Stanford University via motorcade accompanied by Dean Thomas Ehrlich, Law School Dean, and Waller Taylor, Chairman of the Law School Board of Visitors.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL

The formal dedication of the new law school at Stanford will be held on September 27. Your September 21 address to the students, faculty and alumni of the law school is the kick-off of the week-long celebration. Classes began in the new Law School on September 4.

Upon arrival at the University, you will proceed to the courtyard behind the law school, "The Crown Quadrangle", where you will speak to the assembled audience. Following the speech you will proceed to the law student lounge to meet for 15 minutes with some 26 student leaders of the school for approximately 20 minutes. Following this, you will proceed to the law library courtyard for a 30-minute reception with 250 honored guests. From this reception, you will depart via motorcade for Moffett Field Naval Air Station where you will board Air Force

One en route Long Beach Municipal Airport to speak at the NALU Convention dinner.

Stanford Law School was initially established as a Department and accepted its first students in 1893, 2 years after the University opened its doors.

Current student enrollment is about 450.

Stanford is recognized as one of the top law schools in the country. The first faculty member of the Stanford Law School besides the Dean himself, was former President Benjamin Harrison. President Hoover, who is closely associated with Stanford, accepted the nomination of his Party to run for President from the University campus. He made his acceptance speech from the Stanford Stadium. The Hoover Institute is located on the campus.

The undergraduate school is not yet in session.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LIFE UNDERWRITERS - 86TH ANNUAL CONVENTION

You received the invitation to address this group at a meeting March 7 with NALU President Norman Levine, Executive Vice President Barney Smith, and former Congressman Jack McDonald. You had agreed to speak at last year's convention but had to cancel your participation.

You will speak at the John Newton Russell Awards Dinner in the Grand Ballroom in the Disneyland Hotel in Anaheim, California, before approximately 2,000 to 2,100 members and guests. The John Newton Russell Memorial Award is the most meaningful and significant individual honor accorded by the life insurance business. The Award was first presented in 1942. This will be the 34th award given. Mr. Meehan, Chairman of the Awards Committee, will make the presentation.

The National Association of Life Underwriters is a Federation of 950 local and 50 state associations with more than 130,000 members who are career life insurance agents, general agents, and managers. Host of the 1975 NALU annual convention is the 679-member Orange County Association of Life Underwriters. Former HEW Secretary, Robert H. THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. FORD'S
VISIT TO OKLAHOMA AND CALIFORNIA

Monday - September 22, 1975

DAY # 4

Departure: 9:30 a.m.

From: Terry O'Donnell TD

BACKGROUND:

AFL-CIO BUILDING AND TRADES DEPARTMENT

You are scheduled to depart the residence at 9:30 a.m. for departure aboard Air Force One from Monterey Peninsula Airport en route San Francisco (Flying Time: 30 minutes). Upon arrival, you proceed directly to the Hyatt Hotel to address the Annual Building Trades Convention, a gathering of approximately 550 members who will be in attendance at this business session.

In 1908, the Building and Construction Trades Department was chartered by the American Federation of Labor. The Department was to be composed of national and international building trades organizations which are primarily engaged in the building and construction trades industry. Today, 17 national and international unions are affiliated with the Department and represent over 4 million building tradesmen.

The Department, which is one of six in the AFL-CIO, was established to coordinate and harmonize the activities, functions and interests of the affiliated unions. More specifically, the Department is charged with a number of objectives. To cite a few, the Department is to promote the growth of building trades unions, foster apprenticeship training in the industry, advance health and safety practices, secure the adjustment of jurisdictional disputes, assist all affiliates in securing improved wages, hours and working conditions and engage in legislative and research activities designed to assure the interests of building tradesmen.

The construction industry is this nation's largest industry, larger than the steel and auto industries combined, accounting for over 10 percent of our GNP and employing a work force of nearly six million workers during the course of one year.

The industry is unquestionably one of the country's most complicated industries. Thousands of contractors, over 75 percent of whom employ less than 25 workers, and equal numbers of local unions interact to create a picture that many observers have described as diverse, decentralized and downright confusing.

Following your appearance at the Building and Trades Convention, you proceed to the St. Francis Hotel, and after 15-minutes personal time, join the World Affairs Council for a luncheon.

WORLD AFFAIRS COUNCIL

Approximately 1,000 members of the 5000-member World Affairs Council will be on hand. Your participation includes attendance at a General Reception (10 minutes) where you informally greet the assembled members, a head table reception (Attendance: 20), then remarks and a Q and A session along the lines of the recent White House Conferences.

The World Affairs Council of Northern California was formed in 1947 and is a non-profit, educational organization which is solely supported by contributions from its 5,000 individual and corporate members. It has established a resource center for services to high schools in the San Francisco Bay area. It provides speakers and educational materials in the field of international affairs. Each month during the school year, the Council publishes Colloquy an informational bulletin for schools and distributes this to 3,400 social science teachers in the San Francisco Bay area. The Council also publishes Latin American Report, a digest of important Latin American economic and political developments with approximately 550 subscribers throughout the United States and abroad.

Khrushchev, Nehru, DeGaulle, and President Kennedy are among the world figures who have appeared before the Council.

Following your appearance, you return to your Suite for 30-minutes personal time.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

EDITORIAL OPINION:

Deregulation of Natural Gas: (September 17) "Deregulation of newly discovered gas supplies has been proposed by the Ford Administration, and is supported by a majority of the FPC. But there is no visible disposition in Congress to go along; the only legislation that has moved beyond the committee stage is a muddled Senate bill.

...the Ford proposal had advance backing from all but one of 16 governors from the most seriously affected states who recently attended a White House meeting on the situation.

The responsibility now lies with Congress."

Italy: (September 17) "The State Department, having made peace with the Communists of the Soviet Union and China, is going to war against the Communists of Italy. It is an innovative new application of an old American foreign-policy technique with an almost perfect record of failure.

La Stampa, one of Italy's best and most responsible newspapers, has accused Ambassador Volpe of 'open interference in Italian affairs' for the way he has carried on about the Communists. There may be a bit of esagerazione about that, but it is close enough to the truth to be embarrassing.

The land of the free is made to look like a silly old ostrich. It is behavior unworthy of the traditions of the United States -- as unworthy as the provisions of the 1952 Immigration Act being used to justify the prohibition."

Welfare: (September 16) "It is a hopeful sign that the secretary of health, education and welfare, scarcely a month after being sworn in, should take up the subject of welfare reform in public and out loud.

It is one of those national priorities so evident, so urgent and so overstudied that one can only be amazed at the inability of the Ford Administration to make up its mind on the subject. David Mathews now leaves the impression that something constructive is going to be done.

The best thing the White House has done thus far is turn John G. Veneman loose on a special welfare study for the Domestic Council.

There is no question that the nation will have great difficulty paying the price of welfare if costs continue to increase at the rate of recent years...Programs proliferate, and with them bureaucracies, yet there is reasonable doubt that any of the programs reaches all of the people eligible.

Mathews' initiative sounds fine. It will count for something if he can get the President to say the same things."

Sale of Missiles to Jordan: (September 16) "Unless Congress and the Ford Administration can come to an early compromise on the proposed sale of Hawk antiaircraft missiles to Jordan, there is a strong chance that King Hussein will make good on his threat to turn elsewhere for the adequate air-defense system that his country now lacks.

It is no mystery that 'elsewhere' means the Soviet Union. What is a mystery is how anyone in Congress can possibly think that introducing Russian weapons into the Jordanian armory for the first time will benefit U.S. interests.

The arguments raised in Congress against the Administration's proposal are based at best on dubious concerns. The arguments in favor of the Hawk sale are based on political realities and persuasive military needs.

Jordan is a moderate and friendly state that up to now has rejected Soviet efforts at intrusion. The American interest is to keep things that way, and Congress should act accordingly to do so."

Federal Pay Increase: (September 16) "After using stealth and deceit to increase their $42,500 salaries, members of the U.S. Senate must now decide how large that increase should be for themselves, members of the House of Representatives and 17,000 other high-ranking federal officials.

...we support the President's recommendation of 5%, while regretting that the percentage must be the same for all. The victims of Congressional greed are those non-elective public servants who clearly deserve a more substantial increase, but who can receive no more than a now-skittish Congress will have the courage to vote for itself."

S. 1: (September 15) "Legislation now pending in Congress to revise the federal criminal code should be junked.

Senate Bill 1, a massive and complicated measure 753 pages long, is so pervasively and fatally flawed that it lies beyond the scope of any rational amending process.

(The bill) proposes revolutionary change that would vastly enhance the power of government and sharply decrease the freedom of the American people.

Its most drastic provisions would virtually give ownership to the government of all public information. The legislation would accomplish this by creating a new felony: unauthorized disclosure of 'classified' official data. With some 15,000 government employees authorized to classify documents, this provision, with its severe penalties, would permit the government to engage in unprecedented suppression of information.

The sections dealing with 'national defense information' would make government employees and news reporters vulnerable to prosecution that would be limited only by the imagination of the prosecutor.

Government employees who revealed information and reporters who received and published it would be liable under the law...The government would be able to operate behind a screen of secrecy.

...some modifications of sections relating to control of government information may be accepted by the bill's sponsors. Even so, the legislation should be rejected, because freedom is not a commodity to be parceled out in varying degrees to the American people, and S. 1 contains a long array of hazards to a free society."

Refugee Education: (September 12) "The responsibility for educating 40,000 Indochinese refugee children is that of the federal government, but the Ford Administration is unwilling to take the lead.

Instead, and fortunately, educators and members of Congress are exerting leadership. They are also exerting pressure, and they won a small victory the other day. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare agreed to increase refugee education aid.

Members of Congress and California Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles consider the increased level of aid inadequate. We agree.

The government's position is puzzling. Education costs for Cuban refugees were paid by the government. We cannot imagine why Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees would be treated differently."

Sinai Agreement: (September 12) "The new Sinai agreement between Egypt and Israel, from everything we know about it, deserves the strong support of Congress. It ~~appears to be an important step~~ toward peace.

Congress must, of course, double-check the details to be sure that no ambiguities are left unclarified. The prime objective of the congressional hearings is to make sure that the American people know what commitments have been made on their behalf, and to be sure that there will be no misunderstandings about these undertakings"

Soviet Grain Sale: (September 11) "President Ford has decided to try to do something to stabilize grain sales to the Soviet Union. It is a prudent decision. He should use all the muscle he can to promote a formal arrangement.

A long-term grain-purchase agreement with Moscow could not eliminate all the ups and downs of the export market. It could help, however, in the process of making the global food supply more secure."

Nixon Documents: (September 10) "The documents of the Nixon Presidency are now, by act of Congress, public property, and rightly so...Nixon of course should have access to the material, and papers that are strictly personal should be returned to him. But the immediate dispute is over actual custody of the documents, and the ultimate issue is one of trust."

Oil Decontrol: (September 10) "If the senators want to serve the people who elected them, they will vote today to sustain President Ford's veto of a bill resurrecting the old oil price control program, then get on with the business of legislating a sensible program of gradual decontrol...Up to now...the Democratic Congress has refused to cooperate.

The national interest clearly calls for a vote sustaining the President's veto, followed by a good-faith willingness to join the Administration in working out a compromise program for the phased removal of oil price ceilings."

Oil Decontrol: (September 2) "Democratic congressional leaders, after communicating with their constituents during the August recess, returned to Washington in a mood to work with the Administration for a gradual phaseout of oil price controls. Such a compromise is clearly in the public interest; we urge all members of Congress to support it...if the attempt to reimpose the old controls is successful, the real beneficiaries will be not U.S. consumers but members of the world oil cartel, whose ability to extract higher and higher prices will thereby continue all the longer...If they truly want to serve the people who elected them, members of Congress will uphold the President's veto, then join the Administration to work out a compromise program that will move the country toward greater self-sufficiency in oil without undue hardship on the American people.

Phased decontrol along the lines already proposed by Ford should be one element of such a package. Provision for an excess-profits tax on oil companies that do not plow the extra profits into the quest for new energy supplies must be another --along with tax relief to offset at least part of the impact of higher fuel prices on consumer pocketbooks."

Airlines: (August 22) "America's domestic airlines are in trouble, and the response of officials in Washington threatens to make it worse. The government has been developing remedies that conflict with each other and with the long-term interests of travelers, taxpayers and the transportation system...National policy-makers seem to ignore these risks. The Ford Administration has been calling strongly for deregulation as a way of improving efficiency and fighting inflation, but it has also argued for raising air fares again. The Civil Aeronautics Board, whose costly policies and chronic slowness in decision-making have contributed to the airlines' problems, has now adopted a plan that will aggravate these problems by diverting more passengers to low-cost group charter flights."

First Year: (August 8) "...many Americans thought Ford was incredibly naive in opening his inaugural address with the pronouncement that 'our long national nightmare is over.'

It might have been naive at the time. But the history of the past 12 months confirms that the country was ready to put Watergate behind it and to move on...

...The new President has not always had success or consensus in carrying out his policies. The country is not in much better shape than it was when he took office. But he governs with candor and with respect for those who oppose him.

...There is trust in Ford, as there had not been in Nixon.

After the first post-Watergate spate of defeats for congressional seats that traditionally had been held by Republicans, the party is recovering, if slowly, from the harm done it by Nixon. One clear indication of that recovery ~~is that Ford leads all Democratic~~ contenders in the presidential polls.

The country now knows that its institutions, despite their imperfections, are durable and will prevail because they serve a people who are forgiving than vindictive; whose strain of common sense runs deeper than their leaning to intemperate judgment, and whose faith persists.

And that, we think, is why the country has come through this past year without that full measure of rancor and attrition and disruption that many thought was inevitable."
