New tools for drug war

Drug abuse is on the increase again in the United States. Successes in the battle against narcotics in the early 1970s have eroded and the number of individual tragedies caused by drugs is growing. More than 5,000 persons are dying of drug overdoses each year in the United States. Many thousands more are trapped in ruined lives. And drug abuse costs now top $17 billion annually.

The problem of drug abuse is excruciatingly complex. But one thing is clear: The federal government needs several stronger legal weapons to cut down on the profitability and ease of trafficking in heroin and similar dangerous drugs. These necessary and obvious changes in the law have been proposed by President Ford and introduced in the Senate—and they should be enacted as quickly as possible by Congress.

Currently, one in every four persons convicted of trafficking in heroin does not get a prison sentence at all. One in every three draws a term of less than three years, and those who do go to jail are eligible for parole after serving one-third of their sentence. The legislation proposed by President Ford requires mandatory sentences of three years for persons convicted of manufacturing, importing, or trafficking in heroin or similar dangerous drugs, with no parole eligibility for the full three years. Second offenses would draw mandatory sentences of six years.

The new legislation would also tighten up bail restrictions in narcotic cases. Forty-eight per cent of individuals arrested for trafficking in narcotics are rearrested on drug charges while out on bail, according to a Justice Department study. One-fourth of bail jumpers in drug cases are aliens caught smuggling drugs into the United States; they simply post bail and leave the country. President Ford wants to close this loophole by allowing judges to deny bail to persons arrested on heroin charges if they have previously been convicted of a drug felony, are already on parole, are nonresident aliens or fugitives, or have been arrested with a false passport.

Attacking the huge profits being made in drug trafficking, President Ford has asked for legislation to require the forfeiting of cash or securities involved in narcotics sales when found in the possession of a drug dealer. The proposed law would also make it easier to search for large sums of money being transported out of the United States to buy drugs or as illegal drug profits going into secret bank accounts abroad.

Still another legal loophole that helps illegal drug trade is the 24-hour grace period given to small, privately owned boats before they must report to customs after arriving in U.S. waters. The time lag gives plenty of opportunity for unloading illegal drugs before inspection. President Ford's proposals call for all boats to report immediately to customs.

These proposals by themselves won't completely solve the nation's nasty and growing narcotics problems. But all of them will be useful tools in the continuing fight against those who are pushing dangerous drugs for personal profit. Congress should lose no time in passing the legislation necessary to put these tools to work.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Thank you for your letter of August 20, inviting Mr. Richard Parsons of my staff and me to appear and give testimony before the newly created Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

As you know, the President has a keen interest in reducing the level of drug abuse in the United States and he has made this one of the priority objectives of his Administration. As members of his staff, Mr. Parsons and I have served to communicate the President's interest and policy guidance to the Administration officials having direct program responsibility in this area and to help to insure coordination of the total Federal effort.

I am advised by counsel that, as a matter of principle and precedent, members of the President's immediate staff customarily do not appear before Congressional committees to testify with respect to the performance of their duties on behalf of the President. This limitation, I am further advised, has been recognized by the Congress and the Executive as a principle of comity between the respective Branches. I must, therefore, on behalf of myself and Mr. Parsons, respectfully decline the invitation to testify before the Committee in public hearings.

The creation of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control is a clear sign that the Congress shares the President's sense of concern about the tragic problem of drug abuse, and he is eager for those in the Administration with direct program responsibility to work with the Committee in carrying out its mission. Further, I would be pleased to submit to the Committee a written statement concerning the role of the Domestic Council in coordinating drug abuse related activities if it would be helpful.

Sincerely,

James M. Cannon

Dear Sirs:

The new Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control has been charged with the responsibility of reviewing in depth all ongoing programs concerned with narcotics traffic and abuse with an objective of recommending to Congress a comprehensive plan of attack on this problem.

In accord with this mandate, while the physical procedures of amassing and reviewing all available material on this subject is underway, the Select Committee will begin a series of hearings to thoroughly ground its membership on the programs of all agencies and departments involved in drug-related activities. Included in the jurisdiction of the Select Committee is the authorization to "review any recommendations made by the President or by any department or agency of the Federal Government, relating to programs or policies affecting narcotics abuse and control."

Since your Council has a responsibility in this area, it would be appreciated if you would make yourself available to appear before the Committee in public hearings during the week of September 20-24, 1976. Should it be necessary for part of your testimony to be taken in executive session, I would appreciate it if you could notify the committee in advance so that appropriate arrangements can be made.

These public hearings will begin the Committee's study of the Federal response to the current drug abuse epidemic. The Select Committee is concerned with both the domestic and international aspects of the drug problem and the task of supply and demand reduction. I hope that you will contribute to the efforts of the Select Committee by taking this opportunity to brief the Members of the Select Committee on the scope of your operations and the approach which your organization takes toward the complex issue of narcotics abuse and control.

It would be helpful if you could include in your testimony any recommendations which you feel would improve the effectiveness or the efficiency of the Federal effort to control, treat or prevent drug abuse. Tom Vogel of our staff will be in touch with your secretary to discuss your role in the hearings and the necessary arrangements.

Sincerely,

Lester L. Wolff

Dear Madam Ambassador:

I understand that your Mission will host the European Regional Narcotics Coordinators' Conference next week.

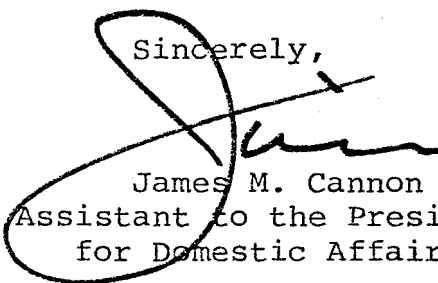

As you know, President Ford has made reducing the tragic toll of drug abuse one of his Administration's highest priorities and has invested a great deal of his personal time and attention to this effort over the past fifteen months. He is deeply concerned about the ravages of drug abuse on American society and his commitment to improving the Federal narcotics program is absolute.

Since most seriously abused drugs have their origins in other countries, our ability to deal with the problem depends to a very considerable degree on the capability and interest of other governments to deal with drug trafficking within their borders and to cooperate with us in law enforcement and exchange of information on the international level. Thus, the international narcotics control program is a vital part of the total effort to reduce drug abuse here in the United States.

On behalf of the President, I would like to ask you to underline the importance he places on this program during next week's conference and thank the participants for their efforts to combat drug abuse. I sincerely hope that the conference will go well.

Warm personal regards.

TALKING POINTS

1. As you know, the problem of illicit drug production and trafficking is one which affects millions of citizens of both our countries.
2. I am greatly appreciative of the efforts your government has made to eradicate both opium poppies and marijuana, and to curtail the trafficking of these drugs to the United States. I want to compliment your government for its commitment to this important effort.
3. I would hope most fervently that you will continue the high priority the eradication and interdiction programs have received over the past several years and that the change-over in governments does not cause any of the momentum to be lost at this critical time.
4. I want you to know that you will have our continuing support and cooperation in dealing with this problem we share. Only by working together can we hope to succeed.

SUBJECT: Letter of Congratulations to Commandant

Illicit Narcotics

On Friday, October 15, the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Sherman intercepted a Panamanian freighter, the DON EMELIO, in the southeastern Bahamas after receiving permission from the Panamanian Government to board the ship. An incredible 160 tons of marihuana was found aboard the ship and seized. The 28-man crew has been turned over to Panamanian authorities for prosecution. The Coast Guard is still searching for a large quantity of cocaine believed to be aboard the ship.

The size of the seizure is notable in itself (this is the largest seizure of illicit drugs on record). More importantly, the seizure resulted from the close cooperation of the Coast Guard, the U. S. Customs Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the State Department and the Panamanian Government. This is the kind of cooperative effort the President has been urging.

I think a congratulatory letter from you, on behalf of the President, is in order and I have prepared the attached for your review.

Dear Admiral Siler:

The President has asked me to express to you his personal congratulations on the recent Coast Guard seizure of the Panamanian freighter, the DON EMELIO, and its cargo of illicit drugs. I understand that the 160 tons of marihuana seized represents the largest single seizure in the history of the United States' war against illegal drug trafficking.

As you know, the President is deeply concerned about the problem of drug abuse and he has made reducing its tragic toll one of his highest priorities. He has been especially interested in ensuring that the total resources of the Federal government are brought to bear on this problem in a coordinated manner. The close cooperation of the Coast Guard, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U. S. Customs Service, the Department of State and the Panamanian Government in this case attests to the progress we have made in this regard.

Please extend my personal congratulations to Captain Deillette and the crew of the Cutter Sherman. They have made a valuable contribution to our national program to combat drug abuse.

Dear Mr. Cannon:

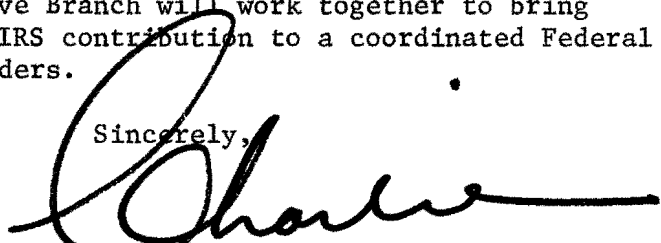

I have followed closely the President's pronouncements and actions in the renewed war against drug abuse. My general concern is that there appears to be a gap between the actions proposed and the resources committed.

Specifically, I am distressed that the Narcotics Trafficking Program (NTP) in the Internal Revenue Service has atrophied during the last two years and that resources previously devoted to it have been diverted to other priority efforts in the Service. I am also confused about the Service's position on structuring the NTP into a viable and identifiable organizational entity where devoted resources -- manpower and dollars -- can be easily counted and results can be appropriately attributed. I am further concerned that IRS policy-makers may place too much emphasis on revenue-producing potential when deciding relative priorities of various programs.

I am aware that the IRS has a pending supplemental budget request under review in OMB for $20.1 million which purportedly would provide ample resources for an effective NTP. I would be happy to support a request for additional resources, if needed, and if the resources were clearly targeted toward suspected tax evaders involved in narcotics who otherwise escape the arm of the law.

I would appreciate your reaction to these concerns. I hope that you and others in the Executive Branch will work together to bring about an early and effective IRS contribution to a coordinated Federal attack on narcotics law offenders.

As you know, the President agrees with you concerning the importance of this program in dealing with high level drug traffickers. Accordingly, at his direction the IRS and the Drug Enforcement Administration have signed a Memorandum of Understanding under which the names of 375 suspected drug violators have already been provided to the IRS for follow-up audit if appropriate. In short, the program is now underway.

As for budgetary resources, the pending FY 1977 supplemental is now being reviewed along with the FY 1978 budget.
