Kleppe Returns To State Cautiously Optimistic

"I'm beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel," said Thomas S. Kleppe, national Administrator of the Small Business Administration, at a news conference in Minot today.

A North Dakota native, Kleppe served one term in Congress prior to his SBA appointment.

Kleppe said the lowering of the prime interest rate, more concern about bringing into balance the federal budget and the joint House-Senate bill authorizing Congress to keep its own books beginning with the 1976 fiscal year are all evidence that the fight against recession is gearing up.

When pressed about the interest rate decline, however, Kleppe said he is not in agreement with earlier forecasts by leading national economic advisors that rates will be down to 6 or 7 per cent by Christmas. He said a 7 or 8 per cent interest rate would pump in the needed capital for small businesses to progress.

Because of high interest rates and deficit federal spending, Kleppe said dollars that should be going into industry to increase production have instead been going to "finance public debt."

He said the government securities offering 10 per cent interest last spring removed over $1.5 billion from the financial institutions which could only offer roughly 6 per cent returns on investment.

Although the government rate has been reduced within the last couple of months, Kleppe said the high interest rate removed from business use money that should be used for "housing or increased productivity, which we've got to have but don't have the capital to provide."

Kleppe said small businesses throughout the nation are suffering because of "shortages of money, shortages of materials and lack of confidence."

He said the lowering of prime interest rates would increase the availability of money and thereby stimulate production.

On the confidence question, Kleppe reiterated optimism with President Gerald Ford, adding that he is a "common sort of man who gets along with everyone." He said President Ford commands the respect of Congress even though he "may not be the brightest man" to have held the executive office.

Kleppe said it is too early to judge the effectiveness of Ford's recent economic summit conference but added that it is unlikely it will not have some positive effects on the nation's economic woes.

On a different matter, Kleppe said he is still pondering the thought of resignation but insisted that his not having set a date is in no way interfering with the effectiveness of the SBA.

Kleppe said he is "55 but feeling like 35" and that he still has a desire to enter into some kind of private financial business. He did not elaborate.

- On a local note, Kleppe said Minot businessmen have an impressive record of SBA loan repayments stemming from the devastating 1969 flood. That record, he said, ranks higher than in nearly all areas of the country where the SBA has been actively granting loans.

Acknowledging that political favoritism has been a factor behind SBA activities in the past, Kleppe said favoritism has been minimized since he took over the office by appointment in 1971 of Richard Nixon.
