Gardens and Grounds*

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

One of the things the President and I have enjoyed most about the White House are its beautiful grounds and foliage. And because we've had such enjoyment from them, we're especially happy to be able to share them with you.

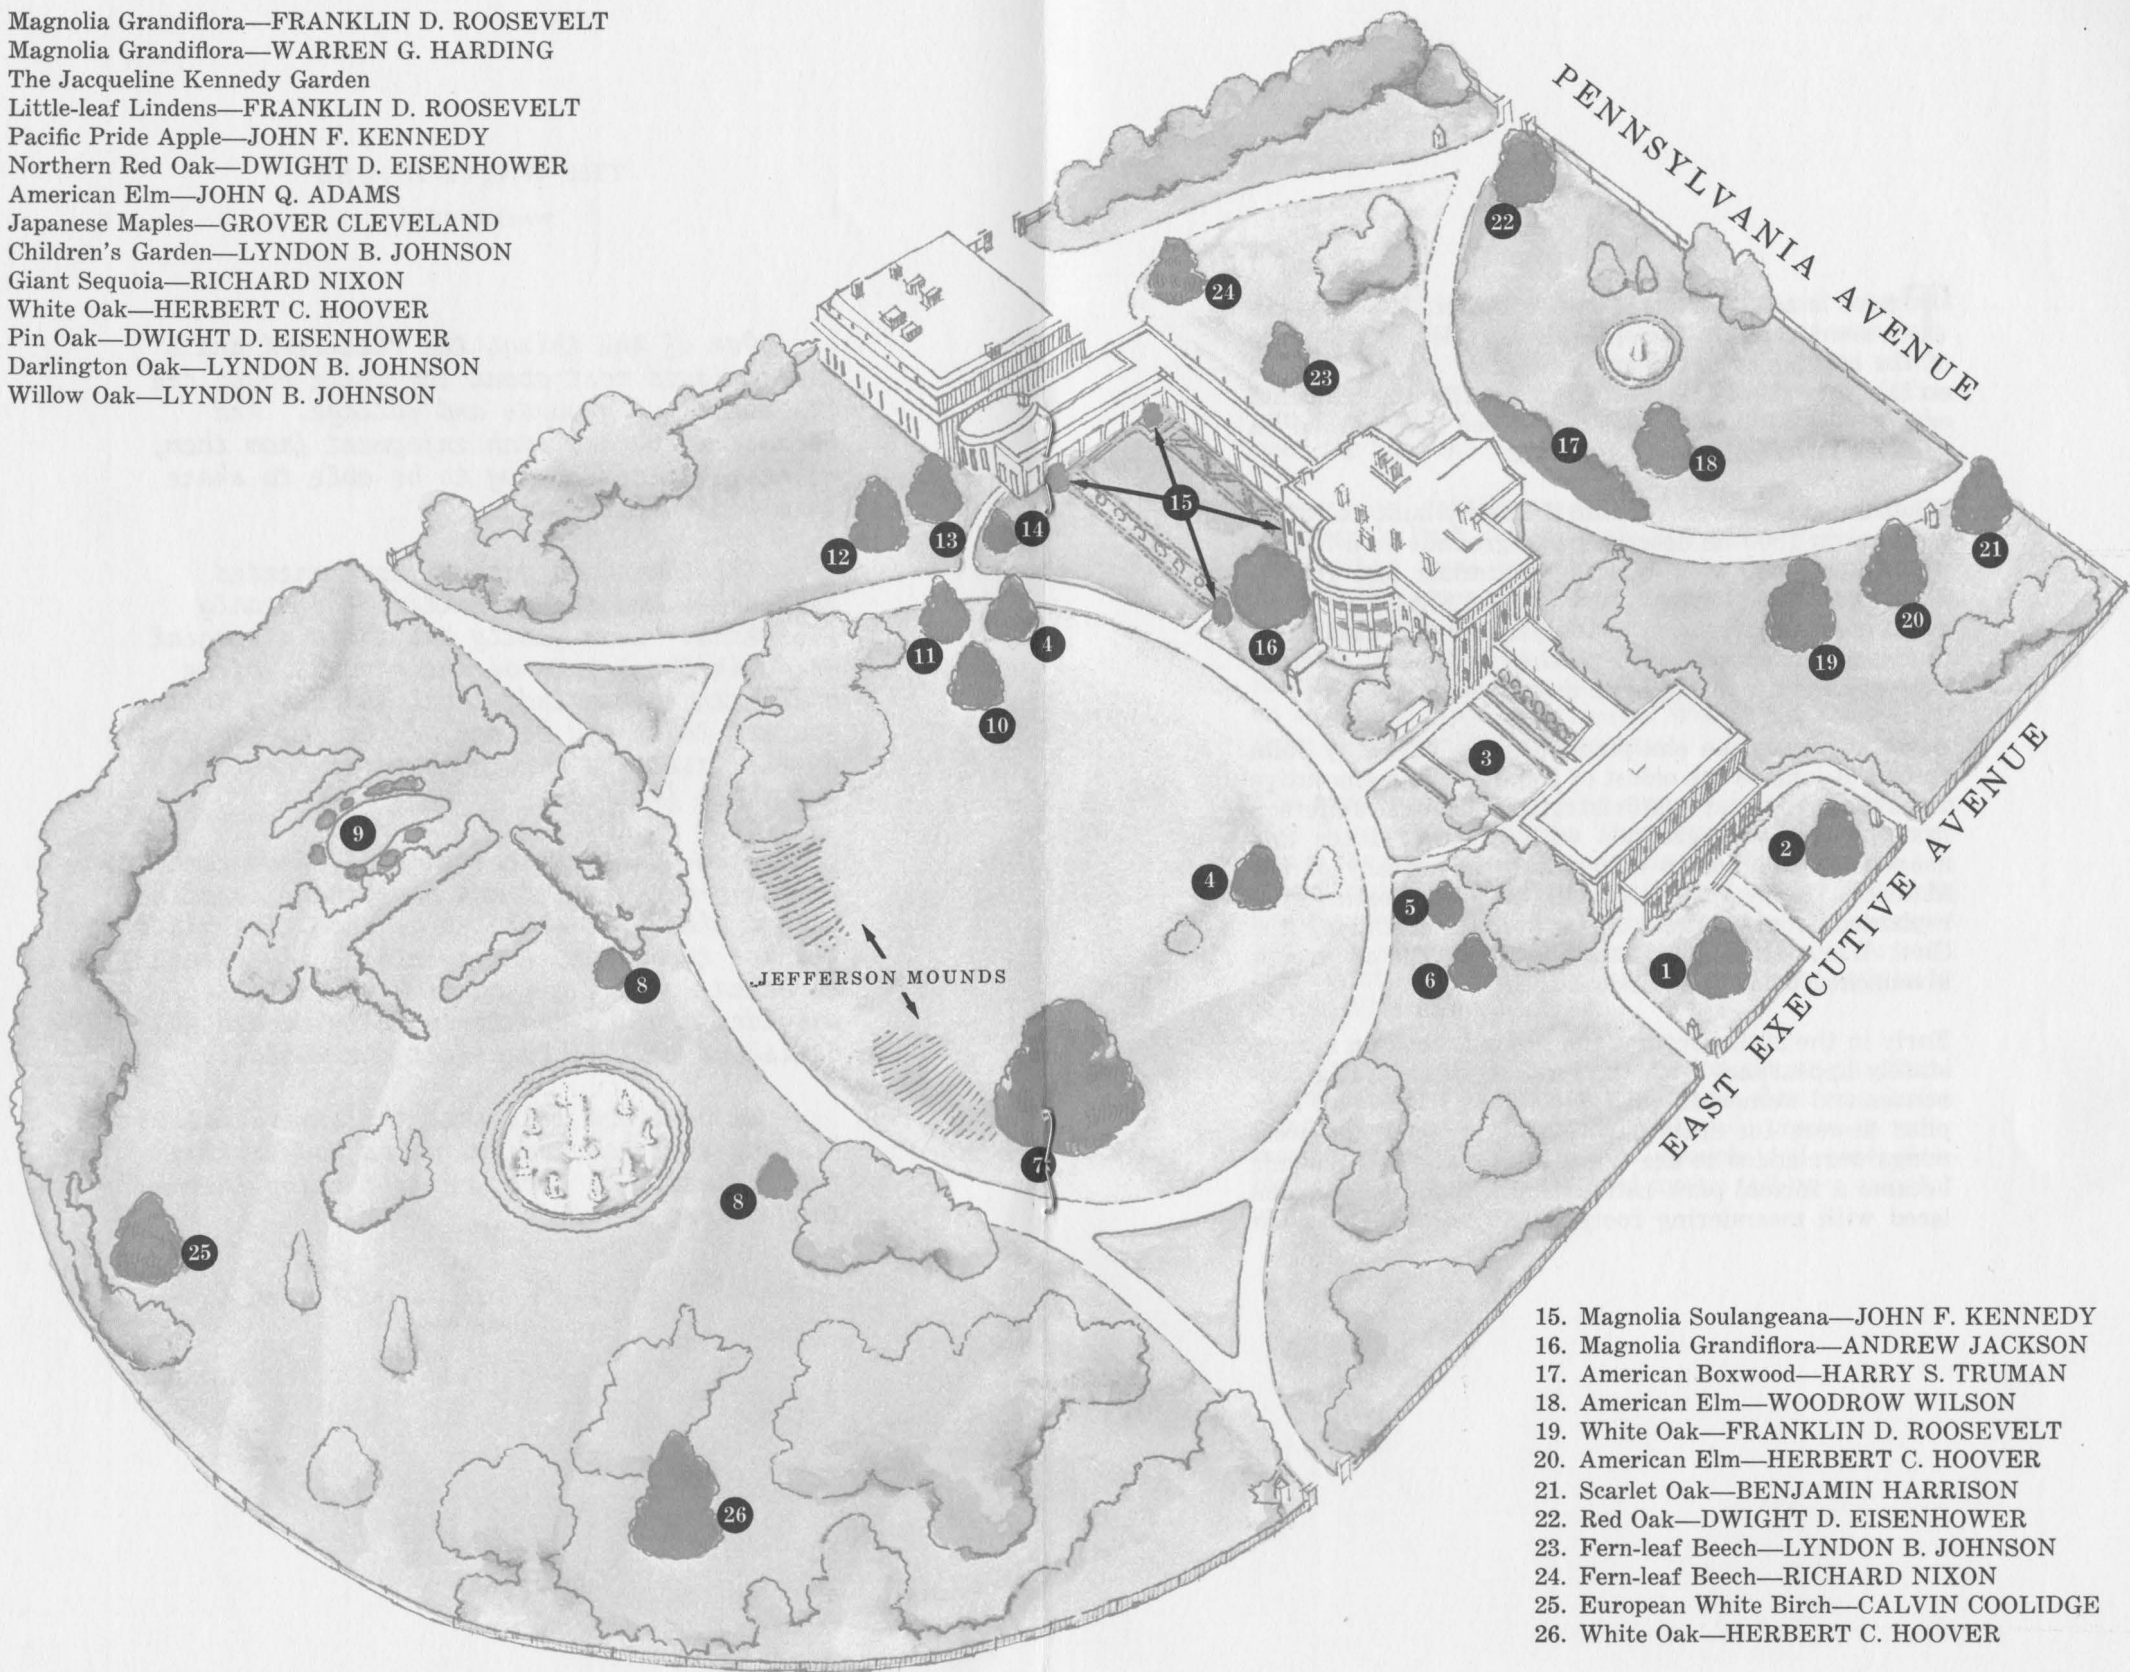

The lawns and gardens have greeted Presidents and their families for nearly 175 years. Each family has taken a special pride in the beauty of the grounds, often adding their own individual touches. What you see today may be one of the few composites of the taste and handiwork of 38 Presidents and their families.

From ponies to Easter eggs, from concerts to bar-b-ques, the lawns have traditionally been a place for children to grow, for historic figures to gather, for events of significance to occur. And the grounds have, as well, provided a peace and tranquility needed for decisions that would affect the world.

We hope you will feel the same sense of history that has touched us as you explore the grounds. We hope you will enjoy them--they belong to you.

There is no other place in the United States where a short stroll in the open air provides such a sense of the continuity of American history as one can feel on the grounds of the White House. All our Presidents except George Washington have lived and worked on this knoll overlooking the Potomac.

When John Adams moved into the newly built executive mansion in 1800 he described the grounds as a barren expanse strewn with building materials and rubble. Since then, nearly every President and First Lady have given personal attention to the gardens and used them in their own special way; lasting reminders of their care are spread throughout the grounds.

A stately American elm planted in the 1820's by John Quincy Adams is the oldest of some 25 commemorative trees placed by past Administrations. Thomas Jefferson first enclosed the grounds with a rustic fence and shaped the Mounds to help define the privacy of the Mansion. The magnolias next to the South Portico were replanted from Andrew Jackson's estate. During the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln looked out on troops bivouacked below his windows.

Early in the 20th Century, the grounds took on a more stately appearance with the removal of several greenhouses and numerous cutting gardens which had supplied flowers for state functions. New east and west wings were added to the White House and the grounds became a formal park rather than a botanical garden laced with meandering footpaths. Theodore Roosevelt was observed outdoors almost daily, engaged in sports and brisk walks with his family and Cabinet members. Woodrow Wilson planted the first Rose Garden alongside the west wing, just outside the Presidential Office, and let sheep graze on the front lawn to dramatize the need for wartime woolens.

The present sightlines and ceremonial character of the President's Park follow landscape plans developed in 1935, when trees were removed to reopen the view toward the river. The grounds now lend themselves to varied kinds of official gatherings, Presidential arrivals and departures by helicopter, and welcoming ceremonies for visiting heads of state. Easter-egg rolling on the south lawn is an Easter Week tradition dating from the Hayes Administration.

The redesigned east garden was dedicated in 1965 to Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy. This intimate, friendly garden is the one most often used by the First Lady in her official duties and for entertaining friends. The beds are planted with spring bulbs; annuals are changed with the season. In addition, small plots are devoted to a variety of herbs, which are cut and used regularly in the White House kitchen.

The President uses the Rose Garden for small official ceremonies and receptions. In spring, flowering bulbs come up beneath blossoming crabapple trees; in summertime some 25 varieties of annuals and perennials bloom with the roses, followed in the fall by a colorful array of chrysanthemums.
