National Defense Transportation Day and National Transportation Week, 1975

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Throughout the history of the United States, our progress as a Nation has been closely tied to progress in the development of our transportation system. Generations of men and women who pioneered and developed the great networks by which we move goods and people today stand high in the ranks of those who have helped make America great.

As the Nation grew, so did its need for mobility. During the last century, this need was well served by expanding rail and water transportation systems. Today, the need is served by a broader range of systems. Motor vehicles and aircraft provide rapid access to every region.

There are still changing needs and new demands for the movement of our people and the goods they produce. Yesterday's methods may not be adequate to overcome the problem of congestion in many of our large population centers. Also, fuels that have powered our transportation machinery in the past may not be sufficient to meet the demands of the future.

So, once again, we look to the people in our transportation industry to make the adjustments required by the changing times. We look to them with the confidence that they will perform as they have in the past and provide improvements that will ensure fast, safe, efficient, and convenient transportation.

In acknowledgement of the importance of our transportation system, the Congress, by a joint resolution approved May 16, 1957 (71 Stat. 30, 36 U.S.C. 160), requested the President to proclaim the third Friday in May of each year as National Defense Transportation Day, and, by a joint resolution approved May 14, 1962 (76 Stat. 69, 36 U.S.C. 166), requested the President to proclaim the week in which that Friday falls as National Transportation Week.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, GERALD R. FORD, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Friday, May 16, 1975, as National Defense Transportation Day, and the week beginning May 11, 1975, as National Transportation Week.

I particularly urge that governors and other elected officials as well as the people of America join with the Department of Transportation in observing this week. It is an observance that is well deserved.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this tenth day of April in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred seventy-five, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred ninety-ninth.

National Defense Transportation Day and National Transportation Week, 1976

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

The economic prosperity of the United States and the maintenance of our national defense depend in large measure on our ability to move goods and people.

The Nation's transportation network is one of our greatest physical assets. We have more than 25,000 miles of inland waterways, 200,000 miles of railroad, four million miles of streets and highways, and 12,500 airports.

As we look to the future, our transportation systems must meet the changing needs and demands of our society. We need to continue the decentralization of authority and increase the flexibility needed by State and local governments to meet their transportation problems. The Federal government must establish economic and regulatory policies which will promote increased efficiency and healthy competition, foster new technologies and energy conservation, and provide lower cost service to the consumer and shipper.

In recognition of the importance of our transportation system, the Congress has requested the President to proclaim annually the third Friday in May as National Defense Transportation Day, and the week in which that Friday falls as National Transportation Week (71 Stat. 30; 36 U.S.C. 160; 76 Stat. 69; 36 U.S.C. 166).

NOW, THEREFORE, I, GERALD R. FORD, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Friday, May 21, 1976, as National Defense Transportation Day, and the week beginning May 16, 1976, as National Transportation Week.

I urge the Governors of our States and other appropriate officials, organizations concerned with transportation, and the people of the United States to join with the Department of Transportation in observing this week.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this fifteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred seventy-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundredth.

Dear

President Ford recently signed a Proclamation designating May 16th as National Defense Transportation Day and the week beginning May 11th as National Transportation Week. In his Proclamation the President states, ". . . we look to the people in our transportation industry to make the adjustments required by the changing times. We look to them with the confidence that they will perform as they have in the past and provide improvements that will ensure fast, safe, efficient, and convenient transportation.

The President asked that I send you the enclosed duplicate of his Proclamation as a small remembrance of this occasion. It comes to you with his very best wishes.

Sincerely,

Dear Marguerite:

Attached is the list of the NDTA Chapters who should receive a ceremonial copy of the Proclamation for National Defense Transportation Day and National Transportation Week. There are 34 on the list; the others I have deleted in order to have 16 Proclamations available for the Department of Transportation out of our complex of 50.

In addition, please order 100 ceremonial copies at a cost of $205.00 and, if possible, send the invoice to:

Mr. Joseph W. Mac Conkey
Regional Coordinator
Office of Public Affairs
Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S. W.
Washington, D. C. 20591

The copies purchased by DOT will be sent out to all the DOT Secretarial Representatives' offices in their respective regions.

Please send the 16 Proclamations out of our complex of 50 to me, and I will forward them on to the Department of Transportation.

Thank you for all the assistance you have given us. Your cooperation has been extremely helpful.

Sincerely,

Helen J. Amidon
National Secretary/Treasurer
