I. PURPOSE

To meet with executives of the Inland Daily Press Association and their wives.

II. BACKGROUND, PARTICIPANTS, AND PRESS PLAN

A. Background

The Inland Daily Press Association is the oldest and largest regional press association in the country. Over 500 daily newspapers are members. Although some are metropolitan newspapers, most are in the 5,000 to 50,000 circulation category, and therefore few have been represented at your regional media breakfasts and luncheons.

As Vice President, you addressed the Association in Denver on March 5, 1974. You were unable to accept their invitations to meet with them in Chicago in October, 1975, or to join them at their recently concluded meeting in Williamsburg, Virginia, February 23 and 24, 1976. Bill Gorog, however, represented you at the Williamsburg meeting.

The group will be briefed by Jim Lynn, Alan Greenspan, and Bill Baroody. (This past year the Association served as a co-sponsor of a White House Conference on Domestic and Economic Affairs in Milwaukee, Wisconsin in August; and assisted with two others in St. Louis, Missouri; and Peoria, Illinois.)

The exact format for this event has not been decided yet. You suggested waiting to learn the results of the New Hampshire primary before deciding on a format. The main options are:

1. Brief remarks and Q&A in the East Room, followed by the reception in the State Dining Room.
2. Reception only.

B. Participants

151 members, 112 wives, and 11 children will be in attendance. Ralph S. Roth, Vice President of Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., is the President of the Association; Robert N. Brown, Publisher of Home News Enterprises of Columbus, Indiana, is the Immediate Past President. William G. Boykin of Chicago is the Executive Director. A complete list of attendees is attached at Tab A.

C. Staff participants

Ron Nessen
Margita White
Randy Woods

D. Press Plan

White House official photographs at reception. Pool press coverage of any remarks and Q&A.

III. TALKING POINTS

No special preparation required.

MEMORANDUM FOR:

ALAN GREENSPAN

FROM:

RANDALL L. WOODS

SUBJECT:

White House Briefing and Reception
for Inland Daily Press Association,
February 25, 1976

We would appreciate it very much if you could meet with the members of the Inland Daily Press Association at 3:45 p.m. on Wednesday, February 25, 1976, in the East Room and brief them for approximately 40-45 minutes (including Q & A) on the economy.

The President is scheduled to meet with the group at 5:00 p.m. following the briefing and then join them in a reception in the State Dining Room at approximately 5:30 p.m. We would hope that you would also be available for the President's portion of the briefing and the reception.

I am sure you are familiar with this group, but by way of background: the Inland Daily Press Association is the oldest and largest association of daily newspapers in the country. Over 500 of the some 1,750 dailies in the U.S. are members. Although some are metropolitan newspapers, most are in the 5,000 to 50,000 circulation category.

Thanks for your help. I look forward to hearing from you.

Two weeks ago we published in this space a letter about the postal crisis from Time Inc. Chairman Andrew Heiskell to President Ford. The President has replied to Mr. Heiskell's letter and we are pleased to carry his response.

Dear Mr. Heiskell:

Thank you for your letter of December 12, 1975. I appreciate your sharing your thoughts with me with respect to the problems of the U.S. Postal Service.

At the time of postal reform, our postal system was in serious trouble. It was suffering under an archaic organizational structure and overlapping and often contradictory laws and regulations. It was also hindered by an ancient physical plant, low employee morale and productivity, and political pressures. These problems left a poor legacy as postal management has struggled to bring about change. Improvements have been made and, despite occasional complaints, the overall record of the Postal Service in terms of reliability and speed of delivery is quite good, particularly when compared with other countries.

This is not to say that postal management cannot do more to reduce unnecessary costs. I know that Postmaster General Bailar is devoting his full energies to this goal. While recent rate increases have been larger and more frequent than we would like, these cannot be attributed solely to the acts of the postal management. The Postal Service, like all business type operations, has had to deal with the strong inflationary pressures of the past few years.

I still believe that the principles embodied in postal reform will provide us with a far more efficient postal system. Among those principles is one which calls for the apportioning of the costs of all postal operations to all users of the mail on a fair and equitable basis. I support that principle; I believe it is sound and that it should be pursued to the maximum extent possible.

The cost of postal operations must be met and should be met equitably. The alternative to users supporting the postal system is to shift the burden to the general taxpayer. Such an approach is not fair and—by itself—would do nothing to reduce postal costs.

I would like to comment briefly on some specific points which you raised in your letter concerning Executive Branch control over the Postal Service. Under the Reorganization Act the operating budget of the Postal Service is the responsibility of the Board of Governors. Federal appropriations to the Postal Service Fund represent only a small portion of total postal revenues and are provided to cover certain specific costs. Among other things, they provide for public service assistance to the Postal Service during the transition to a completely independent status. I have continued to support the annual appropriation of those funds as set forth in the Reorganization Act, but I have also opposed further taxpayer assistance for extended phasing. I do not have responsibility for making recommendations on the remainder of the Postal Service's budget.

In keeping with the Postal Service's new independent status, the White House neither approved nor disapproved the recent postal labor settlement.

There are no easy solutions to the problems and deficits which face the Postal Service. Future rate increases will be necessary to cover costs, and I believe it is reasonable to expect such increases as long as they follow other general price increases in the economy. I remain unconvinced that taxpayers should be responsible to hold down rates for users.

Again, thank you for writing and best wishes.

Sincerely,
