The President
The White House

Dear Mr. President,

You won't recognize my name but I work here in The White House and feel compelled to write you after Tuesday's developments.

What you have accomplished in the past two years is most certainly a distinct credit to your capable and steadfast leadership. I particularly will always admire the commitment and determination you exhibited in dealing with the Democratic Congress. But there is a bigger reason why it hurts to see you leave The White House.

I am now twenty-two years old. The demoralizing and tumultuous storm we weathered two years ago occurred in a very impressionable and important time in my life. However, the integrity and confidence you have returned to the United States Government serves as an inspiration to me and I am now thirty-two years old. The demoralizing and turbulent storm we weathered two years ago occurred in a very important and important time in my life.

However, the integrity and confidence you have returned to the United States Government has been an inspiration to me and I'm sure millions of other young Americans. As your campaign commercial so aptly stated; 'you have made us proud again!'

Today The United States is a better place because of Gerald Ford.

With my most profound respect and best personal wishes,

Sincerely,

Tom Hutton

For our millions of other young Americans. In your campaign no other matter; you have made us proud again!
Today the United States is a better place because of World War.

With my most profound respect and best personal wishes,

Sincerely,

John F. Kennedy

Dear Miss Leonard,

I have taken the liberty of sending this letter through you in the hope it might not get lost in the masses.

Sincerely,

Tom Hutson

Dear Mrs. Leonard,

I have taken the liberty of sending this letter through you on the hope that you might not get lost in the process.

Sincerely,

Tom Stoltz
