JULY 1 - 8:30 a.m.

AGENDA

8:00 - 8:30 a.m.

I. Senate Report

8:30 - 9:00 a.m.

II. House Report

JULY 1, 1969

OFFICE OF THE WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY

THE WHITE HOUSE

PRESS CONFERENCE
OF
SENATOR EVERETT M. DIRKSEN
AND
CONGRESSMAN GERALD R. FORD
THE ROOSEVELT ROOM

AT 9:53 A.M. EDT

CONGRESSMAN FORD: Good morning.

The principal subject this morning at the meeting with the President involved a report on the action in the House and the prospects for subsequent legislation in the House and also the same as far as the Senate is concerned.

I would just like to make one observation about what took place on the House Floor yesterday. I think the victory, narrow as it was, 210 to 205, shows what a combined effort on the part of the President, the Democratic leaders in the House, the Republican leaders in the House, can do to achieve victory for the American people on those issues that are very, very important to the stability and strength of the country, such as inflation.

Without the total combined effort of the President, the Democratic leadership, and those of us on our side, that victory could not have been achieved yesterday.

SENATOR DIRKSEN: We had nothing specific on the agenda this morning. It was just a run-down on both Senate and House affairs. We have finished the Treasury-Post Office Appropriation Bill. We have set the Agricultural Appropriation Bill. It will be debated for the next two days and then it gets one extra day after we return from the July recess.

After that, we take up the Military Procurement Bill and that, of course, includes the ABM authorization.

In the Finance Committee, they are having a review of the abuses in Medicare and Medicaid. Sometime later, they will set hearings on the so-called Surtax. Those will probably run for a little while, but we have only until the end of July in order to get that job done.

I introduced the Voting Rights Bill yesterday. It was by consent referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee. I think, in the main, it is a good bill and we ought to get some early action on it, although actually the Voting Rights Act of '65 does not expire until in late 1970.

So, we will still have time for both the House and the Senate to work their respective wills on this bill.

MORE

I think, generally speaking, that is about the sum total of what we discussed this morning.

Senator Margaret Smith did make a report on the ABM and the general discussion in the committee, the vote that took place and the proposals for anything that may come up on the Floor.

Q Since Senator Smith voted against the ABM in committee, what was the nature of her report?

SENATOR DIRKSEN: Just generally a narrative report as to the discussion and how it was handled by Senator Stennis. Of course, they saved ABM until the last minute. They disposed of the testimony and the mark-up on everything else in the bill until they got to that. That was the last item.

And, obviously, the members were pretty well on record as how they felt and that accounted for the ten to seven vote.

Q Does that ten to seven vote, Senator, look to you like it is encouraging for passage or surprisingly hard?

SENATOR DIRKSEN: No, it is encouraging.

Q Do you have a count?

SENATOR DIRKSEN: We do.

Q What is it?

SENATOR DIRKSEN: As the lawyers would say, my friend, that is a leading question.

Q It is for passage or what?

SENATOR DIRKSEN: Oh, of course. I never think in terms of other than achievement, accomplishment, consummation and glory.

Q On the surcharge in the Senate, apparently there is considerable resistance there.

SENATOR DIRKSEN: Well, we always have our troubles, whether it is surcharge or nearly anything else. But always and always, I have found, as you so well know, that the oil can is mightier than the sword.

THE PRESS: Thank you.
