Under rules at Southern Michigan Prison, inmates may wear any clothing they wish. Remling was wearing a brown jacket, blue trousers and cowboy boots when he escaped.

THE HELICOPTER was hired from Hi-Lift Helicopters Inc. of Plymouth by a man the company owner, Barney Stutesman, identified as Alfred Williams Jr.

"He said he wanted to go to Lansing, wanted the pilot to wait 20 or 30 minutes and then bring him back here," Stutesman said.

Five minutes after the craft took off, Jackson said, the man put a knife to his throat and ordered him to Jackson.

"I tried to get out a distress call," Jackson said, "but he ripped out the communications wires."

Jackson said he came in low at the man's instructions, narrowly topping trees and the wall to evade radar systems at the prison.

"I'll say one thing," Jackson said. "These guys had it worked out."

The spokesman said there appear to be only two contradictory views when it comes to nuclear power. One is that it is dangerous and that no more power plants should be built. The second, he said, is that nuclear power is absolutely safe and is "the best thing since whipped cream."

THE PRINCIPAL issues to be considered, the source said, are the adequacy of safeguards and the storage of nuclear waste. The government once tried to find a permanent graveyard for nuclear wastes but none of the states chosen as likely

THE ADMINISTRATION spokesman characterizes the top-level review as one aimed at "deciding whether what's going on is good enough or whether we should be doing more or doing it differently."

There have been growing signs during the last few days that the breeder program, which was once touted as the main answer to the nation's electric needs of the future, may now be in some difficulty.

First, ERDA acknowledged that there may be a six- to twelve-month delay in the breeder program be-
