Hadassah, August 12, 1976

I'm delighted to welcome the National Board of Hadassah (Ha-da-sah), and I look forward to meeting each of you personally. I know what a hard-working and fine organization Hadassah is, and I share your special areas of interest: health, education and child welfare.

Your humanitarian efforts are  inspiring. Your magnificent medical work in Israel has saved countless lives and helped build bridges of communication between peoples. I'm so impressed with the many medical facilities for healing and teaching that you support.

Your involvement with young people in Israel and America has strengthened both countries. I especially admire your efforts to preserve Jewish heritage and culture, because religious faith is ^{very} ~~is~~ important in the lives of individuals and nations.

The President and I have been honored by being recognized in the Bicentennial National Park in Israel---which is also one of your interests.

You are doing so much to help others, and I feel a special bond with you and your work.

I'm  glad you came today.

Welcoming Remarks, Hadassah, August 12, 1976

We've had an unusually beautiful summer in Washington. It's quite green for August and the flowers especially lovely. I'm so delighted you are here to enjoy this historic home during our Bicentennial year. This dear old house gets lots of company, and I love it best when the rooms are filled with people enjoying themselves.

It's a special pleasure to welcome the National Board of Hadassah, because I know what fine work you do in Israel in education and medical services and of your concern with young people. Thank you for coming today, and I hope your visit to Washington is most enjoyable.

ABOUT HADASSAH....

HADASSAH IN THE U.S.A.

Founded in 1912 by Miss Henrietta Szold, American-Jewish scholar, writer and pioneer Zionist, Hadassah numbers 350,000 members in the U.S.A. and Puerto Rico.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS

Hadassah's American Affairs program relates mainly to civil rights and liberties, U.S. international interests which affect our lives as citizens and those areas which concern us as members of our communities. Chapters wishing to give "local option" community service in Hadassah's name do it within Hadassah's areas of special interest: health, education and child welfare.

The American Affairs Program of Hadassah brings members accurate information needed to help them analyze vital current issues and participate intelligently in public affairs, as individual citizens. There is a constant flow to members of analytical information on legislation which impinges on civil rights and liberties, better housing, education, environment, employment, health and child care, mass transit and welfare.

Since there is often no sharp dividing line between America's domestic and foreign policy, American Affairs also focuses attention of members on certain international issues. This is because any foreign commitment the U.S. makes in foreign aid, reciprocal treaties, trade agreements, etc. can directly affect our lives in our own communities.

To keep apprised of information from the State Department and various governmental and other commissions, Hadassah has a volunteer representative in Washington and is invited to U.S. State Dept. briefings.

Nationally, Hadassah is a non-governmental organization (NGO) of the United Nations, operating as a public relations arm of the UN Office of Public Information, and as an accredited observer to the U.S. Mission to the UN.

JEWISH EDUCATION

Education for creative Jewish living through study, discussion and book review groups, seminars and Education days and forums, is provided by Hadassah to equip members to understand their Jewish heritage and enrich their lives as Jews in this country.

Towards this end, Hadassah has commissioned several important books: Great Ages and Ideas of the Jewish People, Woman of Valor: The Story of Henrietta Szold and, most recently, Balm in Gilead. A founding member of the World Jewish Bible Society, Hadassah is embarked on an intensive new education approach. It promotes the use of the Hebrew language to develop closer ties with Israel and Jews everywhere.

ZIONIST AFFAIRS

Concerned with a just and lasting peace in the Mid-East, which is an objective of U.S. foreign policy, Hadassah provides factual information on the development and security of Israel to the American public. It is engaged in the struggle to alleviate the serious plight of Soviet as well as Syrian Jewry. Also a member organization of the American Zionist Federation, Hadassah subscribes to the Jerusalem Program which declares the unity of the Jewish people and the centrality of Israel in Jewish life.

ACTIVITIES FOR AMERICAN YOUTH

Through its youth movement, Hashachar (The Dawn) Hadassah offers young people a varied program whose goals are enriched Jewish living in the United States, deeper understanding and acceptance of Zionism, stimulation of active interest in Israel and its people. This program has four divisions; three are known as Young Judaea. They are: Junior Young Judaea for boys and girls between 9 and 11; Intermediate Young Judaea for those between 11 and 13; Senior Young Judaea for youth of high school age. The oldest level of Hashachar is Hamagshimim (The Fulfillers) for high school graduates up to age 25.

The Programs, which are geared to the interests of each age division, include discussions, social activities, seminars, leadership training, summer camps and Israel work-study-travel institutes. The Hadassah Youth Center Judith Riklis Building on Mt. Scopus has facilities for some 120 youths from the United States, in Israel for work and study.

Hadassah returned to Mt. Scopus—its "first hill of healing"—and to its hospital and nurses' school installations there, after an absence of nineteen years, when Israel's Six-Day War was over. Re-dedication of this second health frontier—rebuilt and expanded—was on October 21, 1975 and the first 100 patients began a three-stage move-in in April 1976.

Units on Mt. Scopus, an integral part of the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center at Ein Karem, will comprise a 300-bed General Hospital of which the 60-bed Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Rehabilitation Pavilion is a part. An adjunct to the central facilities at Kiryat Hadassah, the hospital will include: Ross Information Center, Sarah Levitz Outpatient Clinics, Mordechai and Ottilie Gorn Therapeutic Pool & Gymnasium, Gertrude and Philip

The Sally and Philip W. Lown-Hadassah Community Health Center at Kiryat HaYovel is an arm of HMO's Department of Public Health and Social Medicine. Created in 1953 as a pilot community health cen- ter serving Kiryat HaYovel's growing population, it treats patients within the context of family, community, physical, emotional and social relationships.

Annually, HMO physicians handle over 50,000 pa- tient visits at the Center, and 14,000 at home. The Center's resources are used by students working for degrees in Master of Public Health and Community Medicine, nursing and other undergraduate teaching programs, and by research workers.

Alyn Hospital and Hansen's Hospital (Israel's only leprosarium) are among hospitals serviced by Hadassah. Other hospitals are affiliated officially through The Medical School.

The Dental Clinic of the Hebrew University-Hadassah School of Dentistry Founded by Alpha Omega, han- dles nearly 53,000 patient visits yearly; a 4-chair clin- ic is for staff and their families' care. Clinic handles 1,000 visits per month.

TEACHING AND RESEARCH

About 2,500 more attend the Institute of Postgraduate Medical Training.

Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School— Israel's first undergraduate medical school started in temporary buildings in Jerusalem in 1949. In 1965, it moved to the Medical Center. Most of the teach- ing staff of the Medical School also hold clinical posts in the Hospital. Many of the over 1,600 graduates now work within HMO and throughout the land.

Henrietta Szold-Hadassah School of Nursing: A first in Israel, it was founded by Hadassah in 1918. Most of its over 1,600 graduate nurses have made con- tributions to nursing education, medical care and community health. In its own building it has housing and teaching facilities for 170 student nurses. Post- graduate courses, seminars, etc. are given to hun- dreds more. New: a four-year degree course in nurs- ing leading to a BS in the Faculty of Medicine.

Hebrew University-Hadassah School of Dentistry Founded by Alpha Omega in 1953 moved, in 1964, to its own five-story Medical Center building. In ad- dition to graduating 350 dentists serving throughout Israel, the School does research, runs a dental clinic and retrains immigrant Russian dentists. Hadassah is responsible for the maintenance budget of the School.

Hebrew University School of Pharmacy: Initiated in 1954; graduated over 300 pharmacists. Now housed in its own Medical Center building are its 32 teachers and 261 students. Under the administrative jurisdiction of Hebrew University, students use the Hadassah Hospital Pharmacy run by Hadassah for their hospital clinical training.

School of Occupational Therapy: Since Hadassah's first course for therapists (1947), over 300 therapists have been graduated. Maintained jointly by Hadassah, Government, Malben and Kupat Holim, its new Mt. Scopus home, Edith and James Ross Building, has been built by Hadassah.

School of Public Health and Social Medicine: Over 200 graduates hold key public health posts. Students now major in Epidemiology, Hospital Administration, Maternal & Child, Family & Community Medicine, Health Education, Public Health.

Postgraduate Fellowships: Since 1946, the program enabled hundreds of Hadassah physicians, nurses and hospital administrators to receive specialized training in the U.S. and Europe.

Research Projects: Hadassah provides "seed money" funds to initiate research in virtually all areas, making it possible for projects to merit grants from governments, institutes, foundations.

HADASSAH SUPPLIES FOR HEALING

Begun as a series of sewing circles, this project—one of the oldest in Hadassah—has grown into an auxiliary of the Hadassah Medical Organization. Its goal is to provide supplies for the Medical Center's "largest linen closet in the land." It now also provides supplies for the Mt. Scopus General Hospital and Rehabilitation Pavilion, the first sector of which opened recently. Also, to encourage the growing textile industry and provide employment, Hadassah buys supplies, whenever possible, in Israel.

youth PROGRAMS IN ISRAEL

YOUTH ALIYAH

Through this youth immigration movement, under the auspices of the Jewish Agency in Israel, Hadassah has helped resettle and rehabilitate in Israel nearly 155,000 Jewish youth from 80 lands. Since 1935, Hadassah has been contributing not only large amounts of money for maintenance and education, but continues as a major contributor for special Youth Aliyah projects which it undertakes from time to time.

Founded in 1934 by Recha Freier and other courageous Jewish leaders in Germany, and by Henrietta Szold, founder of Hadassah, who became its director in Palestine, a post she held until her death, Youth Aliyah has since then "graduated" tens of thousands. These graduates have become a skilled vanguard, a potent and positive force in the development of their country, making contributions to agriculture, industry, teaching, the arts, the defense forces, merchant marine and diplomatic services.

Currently, there are some 16,000 wards in training in 270 Youth Aliyah installations, kibbutzim, youth villages and Youth Centers, where they can be given academic and vocational education plus recreational and cultural activities. Nearly 5,000 more, part of an "internal aliyah" of over 25,000, were recently absorbed. Currently some 2,000 Soviet youth are being provided with special programs. Recently instituted: mobile Culture Caravans which bring enrichment programs of art, music and theater to each installation.

Youth Aliyah, together with the Absorption Department of the Jewish Agency and the Israel Ministry of Labor and Education, runs Youth Centers (Hadassah, understanding this need, recently established three such Centers in Lod, Tel Aviv and Jerusalem) providing vocational training for boys and girls, many school dropouts who continue to live at home.

Ramat Hadassah Szold, once a Reception Center for all children accepted into Youth Aliyah, now offers two-year courses of special education to prepare those who have a low educational level for entry into the regular Youth Aliyah program. The Eddie Cantor Workshop of the Center stresses courses in carpentry, metalwork and pre-vocational training.

At Hadassah-Neurim, the Rural Vocational Guidance Center, Kfar Vitkin, youth from developing towns, Youth Aliyah Centers as well as shareholders' settlements, are given short courses in many different skills and trades needed for village life, i.e. carpentry, cooking, farm machinery care. Facilities include an electronics building and a vocational secondary school.

HADASSAH ISRAEL EDUCATION SERVICES

Hadassah's model education system is continually being updated, as it has since it began over 30 years ago. The recent restructuring and expansion has created a multi-level comprehensive education network encompassing the latest theories of secondary and community college career-oriented schooling.

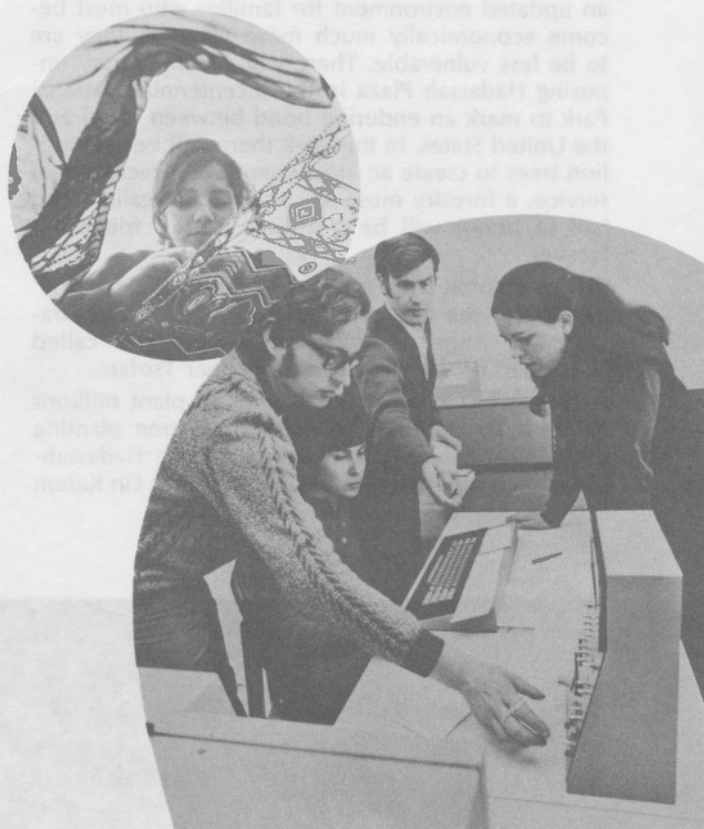

The restructured Hadassah Comprehensive High School/Seligsberg-Brandeis results from a merger of the Hadassah Alice Seligsberg Comprehensive High School and Brandeis Vocational Training Center. Together with the 2-year Hadassah Community College, located in the new Joseph and Caroline Gruss Building, both schools are based, physically, in the former enlarged, renovated Seligsberg and Brandeis complex in Jerusalem. The standard-making Hadassah Vocational Guidance Institute stays on in the Straus Health Center.

Now fully consolidated: the boys of Brandeis and the girls of Seligsberg go to a four-year co-educational school, with a student capacity of 1,000. Technical classes are in the former Brandeis area, academic in Seligsberg. Throughout, emphasis is on enriched vocational and academic studies.

The two-year Hadassah Community College, first in Jerusalem, has hundreds of graduates. Some 300 students can now train for para-professional posts in education, health, medicine, science, etc. Training is for Scientific and Medical Photography, Electronics, Computer Sciences, Medical Technology, Medical and Scientific Secretaries, Medical Record Librarians.

In Brandeis' Fine Mechanics and Precision Instruments School the present four-year curricula stresses mechanics, scientific subjects, precision instrument design and repair, tool and die-making.

The Hadassah Vocational Guidance Institute is the only non-public guidance center offering individual counseling, group guidance and selection testing recognized by the Israel Government. It tests 16,000 clients annually, also handles 1,600 mail and telephone inquiries. It recently tested its 100,000th client and, since the 1973 Yom Kippur War, has been working to rehabilitate war-disabled men and war widows who must often work for the first time. The Institute is accredited by the Hebrew University for those serving internships required for an M.A. in Vocational Counseling, and has been selected to take Tel Aviv interns, too. The research staff has developed over 100 psychological tests. Most recently, new immigrants, many from the Soviet Union, have required new testing and guidance routines.

PROGRAM IN ISRAEL

Through the Jewish National Fund Hadassah has participated in the reclamation of tens of thousands of acres for farming and industrial sites. Much of this land has been prepared for settlement by immigrant families, enabling them to earn a livelihood as they expand Israel's agricultural development.

An integral partner in JNF work since 1926, Hadassah has provided more funds for land projects than any other single organization in the world. Every three years Hadassah embarks on a specific JNF commitment. Currently in Tefen, in upper Galilee, a rocky wilderness near the sensitive Lebanese border, JNF—with Hadassah's aid—will build a new, modern industrial center. This will provide jobs in an updated environment for families who must become economically much more viable if they are to be less vulnerable. There will also be a very imposing Hadassah Plaza in the Bicentennial National Park to mark an enduring bond between Israel and the United States. In this park there will be one-million trees to create an area where every recreational service, a forestry museum, observation gallery and hall of honor will be a green oasis of friendship forever.

Just completed was Hadassah's "Green is Beautiful" project for the towns of Shderot, Netivot and Ofakim. The project immediately before this called "Guardian of the Desert" was at Beer Tsofar.

Hadassah has also provided funds to plant millions of trees. It continues, in addition to tree planting throughout the land, to help reforest the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center sites at Ein Karem and Mt. Scopus.
