President Ford today directed James M. Cannon, Assistant to the President for Domestic Affairs, to review personally the damage to the Long Island, New York, beaches and to determine what appropriate Federal action can be taken to remedy the problem.

The President, noting the potentially adverse economic and health impact, is directing the appropriate Federal agencies to assist State and local officials under existing statutory authority. Mr. Cannon, along with other White House staff members and Federal officials, will tour the affected area on Friday, June 25.
