The original documents are located in Box D23, folder “Trunk ‘N Tusk Club, Tucson, AZ, January 20, 1968” of the Ford Congressional Papers: Press Secretary and Speech File at the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Library.

Copyright Notice
The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material. The Council donated to the United States of America his copyrights in all of his unpublished writings in National Archives collections. Works prepared by U.S. Government employees as part of their official duties are in the public domain. The copyrights to materials written by other individuals or organizations are presumed to remain with them. If you think any of the information displayed in the PDF is subject to a valid copyright claim, please contact the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Library.
Excerpts from a Speech before the Trunk 'N Tusk Club, Tucson, Arizona.

President Johnson said in his State of the Union Message that "there is in the land a certain restlessness--a questioning." More accurately, the American people today are not only uneasy but frightened.

They are frightened because their commander-in-chief has almost furtively edged this Nation into a massive land war in Southeast Asia to which he has committed 525,000 American military personnel.

They are frightened because if there now is a light at the end of the Vietnam tunnel it is little more than a tiny candle.

They are frightened because riots exploded in 120 of our cities last year and the prospect is for more such conflagrations in 1968.

They are frightened because the national crime rate has jumped 67 per cent since 1960--seven times faster than the growth in population--and yet Administration-minded U.S. senators concerned about the rights of the criminal balk at a strong omnibus crime bill.

The people are frightened because the cost of living keeps rising and the value of the dollar keeps shrinking.

All of their fears are joined in one staggering realization--they are living with government by crisis.

The Johnson-Humphrey Administration has failed to solve the people's problems. The problems have reached crisis proportions. The Administration drifts from crisis to crisis, and to meet each emergency President Johnson offers the people a no-choice solution.

The line is...we have no choice but to take drastic action under the circumstances that face us. Never is there an explanation of why the problem was not met head-on before it reached mountainous magnitude.

The no-choice Johnson-Humphrey Administration tells us we have no choice but to take away the freedom of many Americans to travel where they wish and of American businessmen to invest where they will.

We had no choice, the President informed us last year, but to impose compulsory arbitration on labor and industry to keep the Nation's trains running.

(more)
He had no choice, Lyndon Johnson would have us believe, but to send more than 500,000 Americans to Vietnam to do the job that he once told us—in the presidential campaign year of 1964—Asian boys should be doing.

We have no choice, the President tells us, but an income tax increase.

We have no choice, the President insists, but to spend more and tax more.

If we do not take the Administration route of no-choice, the route of the tax increase, the big bad Congress will be to blame for the inflation and high interest rates that will bedevil us in 1968, the President implies as this presidential campaign year begins.

But there is a choice. There is a better way. It is the Republican way of putting first things first, whittling problems down to size with the aid of private enterprise and moving toward desirable national goals without the Great Leap Forward that falls short and gives rise to riots and revolution.

The LBJ way has brought us to the brink of disaster.

Is this an exaggeration? Cut through the LBJ you-never-had-it-so-good propaganda and look at the facts.

The very foundation of the world monetary system is being shaken.

The British have devalued the pound. The Johnson-Humphrey Administration is resorting to direct controls over the dollar in a desperate attempt to at least narrow the balance of payments gap.

The English have cancelled their order for 50 American F-11I planes to improve their own balance of payments situation and have moved up their timetable for withdrawal of all British forces east of the Suez except Hongkong.

What does all this have to do with the man on the street? These developments will affect the lives and pocketbooks of millions of Americans.

Should we retaliate against the British by cancelling the $425 million worth of arms orders we have placed with them? If we did we would be in great danger of hurting ourselves. The pound and the dollar are in the same boat. If there is a second devaluation of the pound, it is doubtful the dollar could withstand the pressure for devaluation. All Americans then would suffer a loss.

The pass to which the Johnson-Humphrey Administration has brought the United States—direct dollar controls which may breed additional controls—underscores the urgent need for a return to fiscal responsibility in our national affairs.

The American people are frightened. Europeans are frightened. What we need is a resurgence of confidence in the dollar and in America's ability to put its fiscal house in order. For their part, Republicans are determined to force upon the no-choice Johnson-Humphrey Administration a spending hold-down that will lead us away from the chaos which threatens us.

# #
Excerpts from a Speech before the Trunk 'N Tusk Club, Tucson, Arizona.

President Johnson said in his State of the Union Message that "there is in the land a certain restlessness—a questioning." More accurately, the American people today are not only uneasy but frightened.

They are frightened because their commander-in-chief has almost furtively edged this Nation into a massive land war in Southeast Asia to which he has committed 525,000 American military personnel.

They are frightened because if there now is a light at the end of the Vietnam tunnel it is little more than a tiny candle.

They are frightened because riots exploded in 120 of our cities last year and the prospect is for more such configurations in 1968.

They are frightened because the national crime rate has jumped 67 per cent since 1960—seven times faster than the growth in population—and yet Administration-minded U.S. senators concerned about the rights of the criminal balk at a strong omnibus crime bill.

The people are frightened because the cost of living keeps rising and the value of the dollar keeps shrinking.

All of their fears are joined in one staggering realization—they are living with government by crisis.

The Johnson-Humphrey Administration has failed to solve the people's problems. The problems have reached crisis proportions. The Administration drifts from crisis to crisis, and to meet each emergency President Johnson offers the people a no-choice solution.

The line is...we have no choice but to take drastic action under the circumstances that face us. Never is there an explanation of why the problem was not met head-on before it reached mountainous magnitude.

The no-choice Johnson-Humphrey Administration tells us we have no choice but to take away the freedom of many Americans to travel where they wish and of American businessmen to invest where they will.

We had no choice, the President informed us last year, but to impose compulsory arbitration on labor and industry to keep the Nation's trains running.
He had no choice, Lyndon Johnson would have us believe, but to send more than 500,000 Americans to Vietnam to do the job that he once told us—in the presidential campaign year of 1964—Asian boys should be doing.

We have no choice, the President tells us, but an income tax increase.

We have no choice, the President insists, but to spend more and tax more.

If we do not take the Administration route of no-choice, the route of the tax increase, the big bad Congress will be to blame for the inflation and high interest rates that will bedevil us in 1968, the President implies as this presidential campaign year begins.

But there is a choice. There is a better way. It is the Republican way of putting first things first, whittling problems down to size with the aid of private enterprise and moving toward desirable national goals without the Great Leap Forward that falls short and gives rise to riots and revolution.

The LBJ way has brought us to the brink of disaster.

Is this an exaggeration? Cut through the LBJ you-never-had-it-so-good propaganda and look at the facts.

The very foundation of the world monetary system is being shaken.

The British have devalued the pound. The Johnson-Humphrey Administration is resorting to direct controls over the dollar in a desperate attempt to at least narrow the balance of payments gap.

The English have cancelled their order for 50 American F-111 planes to improve their own balance of payments situation and have moved up their timetable for withdrawal of all British forces east of the Suez except Hongkong.

What does all this have to do with the man on the street? These developments will affect the lives and pocketbooks of millions of Americans.

Should we retaliate against the British by cancelling the $425 million worth of arms orders we have placed with them? If we did we would be in great danger of hurting ourselves. The pound and the dollar are in the same boat. If there is a second devaluation of the pound, it is doubtful the dollar could withstand the pressure for devaluation. All Americans then would suffer a loss.

The pass to which the Johnson-Humphrey Administration has brought the United States—direct dollar controls which may breed additional controls—underscores the urgent need for a return to fiscal responsibility in our national affairs.

The American people are frightened. Europeans are frightened. What we need is a resurgence of confidence in the dollar and in America's ability to put its fiscal house in order. For their part, Republicans are determined to force upon the no-choice Johnson-Humphrey Administration a spending hold-down that will lead us away from the chaos which threatens us.

# #