MEMORANDUM FOR: JACK WARNER
~~XXXXXXXXXXXX~~
FROM: JACK MARSH

I have noticed in the news items you send me, as well as in the summary of nationwide Bicentennial activities, there are a number of programs and projects occurring at the county and community level. I am sure that in many areas of the country, there are a number of public building projects underway which in the locale are identified with the Bicentennial. I assume also, dedication programs are planned for 1976 as a part of the community's observance of this event.

Recalling that one of the buildings of the Smithsonian is a product of the Centennial, is there some way we can establish some permanent identification of these community public building projects where for historical purposes this Bicentennial aspect is preserved?

Is there some type of logos that lends itself to a metal plaque or stone tabloid which can be part of the structure and will call to the public's attention in years to come that that facility was a product of Bicentennial endeavors.

I would be grateful for your thoughts and suggestions on this.

RUSS ROHRKE

FROM:

JACK MARSH

I have a suggestion for Jean McFee over at the Bicentennial Commission. It relates to some sort of plaque or other device which can be part of a building or other structure built or dedicated in the Bicentennial Year.

Please see me about this.

Manythanks.

MEMORANDUM TO: JACK MARSH
FROM: BOSS BOURKE

Jack, in a separate conversation, with Milt Mitler this morning, I raised the subject concerning the Bicentennial plaque program. Milt indicated that, since he was meeting with Jean McKee this afternoon, he would raise this subject with her. We agreed that it would be helpful, before AREA self-destructs, to get the message out through the various State and Regional Bicentennial operations. Milt will pursue this with Jean, and I will contact her separately to follow-up.
