Holton Arms has always had a reputation for encouraging girls to reach for their potential. And so I think today -- tied in with International Womens Year -- marks the realization of what was once an impossible dream for women. We are on the brink of a new generation of women today. Never has there been so much awareness of the potential of women. I wanted to come today because I feel so strongly about womens' role and because I would encourage women everywhere to reach for their potential in whatever direction they choose to go.

Press Release From Holton Arms School, January 15, 1975

In keeping with 1975 International Women's Year the Upper School of Holton Arms has set aside January 15th as a day of seminars. The subject: Potential of Women. Ninety-nine guest speakers, experts in their individual fields, will handle seminars on thirty separate subjects. Classes will be closed for the day so that the students of the Upper School may participate in the seminars of their choice.

Believed to be the first program of its kind to be instituted at the secondary school level, the day was planned by interested students with the help and support of the faculty and the administration. Two main topics will be under consideration: Careers for Women and Concerns of Women. Each area is broken down further into individual subjects of interest. A poll of the students was taken to determine these areas of interest and the subjects to be discussed.

According to Mrs. Mary Jane Puckett, Dean of Students, the purpose of this day is to give students a awareness of the choices and challenges that await them in the future. "As an all-girls' school, Holton Arms recognizes the potential of women in today's society, and this program has been enthusiastically endorsed by our Head Master, Mr. James W. Lewis."

Among the discussion topics for the day are the following: in Careers--architecture, the arts, business, education, fashion and merchandising, government, journalism, the law, medicine, psychology, scientific research, social work, and veterinary medicine; in Concerns--alternate life-styles, conscience-raising groups, education of young women, health care, minority women, sex role stereotypes, women's economic problems, women and the law, women in politics and government, women in religion, and women in sports.

The Steering Committee for the Potential of Women Seminar is headed by Lisa Camalier, student chairman; and assisted by Phyllis Carter, Gail Ehrlich, and Marcia Johnson. Faculty members are Mrs. Irene McGarry, faculty chairman; Mrs. Margo Dunlavey, Mrs. Shelley Levi, and Mrs. Mary Jane Puckett.

Keynoter for the day's event will be guest speaker Dr. Elizabeth Tidball, Professor of Physiology at George Washington University.

Holton Arms School is located in Montgomery County, Maryland, and has been educating young women for almost 75 years. An independent day school enrolling girls in grades 3-12, Holton Arms offers a broad pre-college program designed to provide sound preparation for education beyond the secondary years. The school believes in the importance of a structural, sequential curriculum which allows for individuality of teaching methods and an increasing number of course options at each grade level. Holton Arms believes in preserving continuity even as it affects change.
