POOL REPORT

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Four Fords left the White House a little after 7:30 for an un-escorted drive up to the Rockefeller's Foxhall Road spot. The President, Mrs., Jack, and Susan disappeared into the compound gates, leaving your pool in the roadway, blocking traffic. After about three hours, the limosine pulled out of the darkness from the Rockefeller woods...and barrelled home. At the South Portico door, the President paused long enough to shout back to your questioning pooler: "It was a nice family evening." No one at the White House (or Rockefeller's office) seemed to know who, other than four Fords and two Rockefellers, was present. Certainly no staff members. Evening arranged suddenly...without much notice for anyone. Could that be why the other poolers never showed up for the trip?
