

POOL REPORT--Pool # 3

A crowd of perhaps 100 stood on the cobblestones and brick sidewalks of Delancey Street waiting for the President to come out of Barclay House enroute to the debate. They were all neighbors of the Haas family, or guests of neighbors. Casually dressed but obviously affluent. There were a lot of children. The crowd was in a festive mood, as if at a block party. At 9:06 p.m. Sen. Richard Schweiker arrived and went inside the house. At 9:13 p.m. the President came out, grinning broadly and looking fully ready for battle. The crowd cheered. He gave them a big wave and hearty smile and then immediately got in his limousine. Along the motorcade route there were just occasional knots of people, waving as he passed. The trip took four minutes. By time poolers could get out of cars the President had been taken inside the theatre.
