

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

JUNE 15, 1971

OFFICE OF THE WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY

THE WHITE HOUSE

PRESS CONFERENCE
OF
SENATOR HUGH SCOTT
AND
CONGRESSMAN GERALD F. FORD

THE BRIEFING ROOM

AT 10:15 A.M. EDT

MR. ZIEGLER: The Leadership Meeting this morning lasted for two hours. Senator Scott and Congressman Ford are here to give you a report on that meeting.

Senator Scott.

SENATOR SCOTT: There was discussion of the forthcoming vote tomorrow before five o'clock on the McGovern-Hatfield Amendment. I reported to the President that the vote this year will be very close to the same vote last year when the amendment lost 39 to 55. There are about six doubtful and the vote will be in the same neighborhood, give or take one or two votes.

I also brought up at another part in the discussion the old question of the inadvisability of fixing a deadline for the withdrawal of troops. I am convinced that fixing a deadline could not be helpful and would, indeed, be harmful to the continuing negotiations.

Congressman Ford can speak on it, but I gather that the fate of the Nedzi-Whalen Amendment is about the same in the House of Representatives. I will turn over the discussion to Representative Ford now on the question of drug addiction, which consumed at least an hour, didn't, Jerry?

CONGRESSMAN FORD: Thank you very much, Hugh.

The first hour of the Leadership Meeting this morning was in reference to the President's expanded program against the problem of drugs in the United States.

The President is sending a Message to the Congress on Thursday, which will call for the establishment of a White House office to coordinate the expanded program. It will have four main points, first of which is to expand our efforts to get at the source of supply in those countries where heroin, hard drugs, are grown.

The President had a meeting with Ambassadors from these countries earlier this week.

MORE

Secondly, there will be an expanded effort by the law enforcement agencies against the pushers, the professional people who make these drugs available to the people who are in the process of becoming addicts.

Thirdly, there will be a greatly expanded program for the veterans who are all over the world, who have become addicted to the drug problem.

It will be a detoxification program, a readjustment program, so that when they get back to society, they will not have the problems that they acquired at the time they were in the service.

Fourthly, there will be a program greatly expanded as well of education to convince younger people primarily that the drug culture atmosphere is not in their best interests or in the best interests of the country.

This Message will come up on Thursday. It will include legislation to expand in the areas I have indicated and will include a request for additional funding.

Q How much?

CONGRESSMAN FORD: That particular dollar amount was not discussed in detail. It will be included in the Message, but the indication was it would be fairly substantial.

MORE

Q Senator, has the publication by the New York Times of these documents on Vietnam affected the Senate attitude on the MaGovern-Hatfield Amendment?

SENATOR SCOTT: I very much doubt it. The sentiment on MaGovern-Hatfield is substantially as before, but the improvement in the withdrawal situation in Vietnam is marked. There have been something over 200,000 armed forces withdrawn from Vietnam since the MaGovern-Hatfield Amendment was first discussed about two years ago.

And I do not think that there has been any impact on this vote at all.

CONGRESSMAN FORD: If I might supplement that, because the question could be, "Would the document release have an impact on the Nedzi-Whalen Amendment?"

I don't think it will for this reason: When President Nixon came into office, he asked for a total reassessment of the situation in Vietnam and on the basis of that reassessment, the policy of withdrawal was implemented.

So this Administration is not predicating its actions on any of those documents that have been revealed. This Administration is acting on the basis of a new reassessment that was made at the outset of the Administration.

SENATOR SCOTT: The President's first action when he became President was to call for this full and complete reassessment of foreign policy and on that basis he evolved his own new foreign policy.

Q Could I ask you gentlemen if you support the move of the Administration to impose an injunction on the New York Times not to continue publishing this?

SENATOR SCOTT: I understand that the Justice Department will take such action as it deems in the interest of national security. You have seen the papers. There has been the necessary preliminary demand for the return of the documents.

I take it that that is the first step on which an injunction would be based. But you would have to ask the Justice Department how they would proceed step by step.

Q Senator, I think maybe you ducked my question. I asked you if you supported an injunction against the New York Times.

SENATOR SCOTT: On the question of classification of documents, the declassification can only be made by the Executive Department. And a release of classified information, if it violates the law, would require action by the Justice Department. If they so conclude, then I would feel that they were acting in accordance with their own sworn duty.

Q Mr. Ford?

CONGRESSMAN FORD: This is classified information. There is a law that says the release of such information is in violation of the statute.

This matter undoubtedly, if the New York Times continues, will go to the courts. The final decision will rest with the courts as to whether or not there has been a violation of the law. That is where the decision will be made. It won't be made in the Congress and it won't be made in the Executive Branch of the Government.

SENATOR SCOTT: The courts would have to determine the question of the damage to the integrity of government and to the trust of other governments in dealing with us incidental to the whole question of who has the right to classify and declassify documents.

THE PRESS: Thank you, gentlemen.
