DECLASSIFIE

Kissinger: Javits and Jackson are circulating a letter on the Hill supporting secure defensible borders; the US must give military support regardless of what Israel does because it is a bastion of democracy; and we must put pressure on the Arabs. It sounds very reasonable.

President: I don't think Chuck should sign it.

Kissinger: He won't sign, but wants to know if he should oppose it. They have Dale McGee on board. Maybe I should tell Javits if they say we haven't given enough, we will publish the data.

President: Scranton came in. He obviously had talked with the Jews -- and said I had obviously lost trust in Rabin.

Kissinger: They will play it 1000 ways. It is not a matter of trust, but a loss of confidence based on expectations. You will be under monumental pressures to show confidence. They will come after me -- they will work through every White House assistant until they find someone who can get to you and around me.

President: It is so unwise.

Kissinger: In another war, they will be forced back to the '67 frontiers -unless you want to confront the Soviet Union, Europe, and the Japanese. You may have to make your speech sooner.

President: For us to go back to the step-by-step when Israel is frozen just won't work.

Kissinger: Congress won't support us in a war in the things which have to be done. If we have to inform them of every move of forces, it will scare them to death.
