Dear Mrs. Ford,

I thought the article in Parade magazine two weeks ago about your life today and the important work you are doing was inspiring! I just wanted you to know how much I admire what you are accomplishing at the Betty Ford Center.

From time to time I hear a warm, loving word about you from Patti Matson but, unfortunately, I do not see Patti as much as I would like.

I send warm greetings of friendship, and admiration,
Sincerely,
Julia Eisenhauer

Dear Mrs. Ford,

I am sure without a moment's hesitation that you are being inundated with messages of gratitude, admiration and with hundreds of queries which hopefully will lead to healing for many alcoholics and their families. I have always admired you and am sure your program is doing a lot of good.

All that said, it is painful for me to address one of the points made in the ABC television film of your story. It is a point you and President Ford made in your memoirs as well and I regret more than I can say that I did not query you at the time the books were published. It is contended that the Nixons instructed the household staff not to speak to them, as they did not believe in "fraternizing." The implication is that my parents were insensitive and cold--snobs as well. It is a cruel characterization and of all the anti-Nixon gossip, the most far-fetched.

My parents spent hours talking with the maids and butlers about everything from their favorite ball teams to the doctorate one of the doormen's sons was studying for to the politics of the day. They took doorman Freddie Mayfield with them to Florida on a vacation in order to help him achieve his dream of a real fishing trip. As far as we know, my parents were the only President and First Lady to invite every member of the household staff to the White House as guests (the church services), totally apart from an annual staff-only party. The list goes on. Evidently, you heard complaints, but I wish you had paused to consider the pressures on household and official staff during that 1974 transition which may have led them to say things which they knew to be untrue.

My parents during twenty-eight years in public life, which encompassed five national campaigns and five and a half years in the White House, always cared deeply about their close official and personal staff. I do not see any point in publicly disputing what you said, but I just wanted to let you know how I feel.

Sincerely,

Julia Eisenbauer

Dear Mrs. Ford,

It was a great joy to see you and President Ford at the Nixon Library Dedication. I was particularly glad that the four Presidents and their First Ladies were able to take the time for the luncheon afterwards. There was a spirit of friendship and comradery in the room that I shall not forget. Thank you for your gracious letter.

Dear Ms Ford,

How dear of you to write me.
I appreciated the personal note and regret that our paths did not cross during this trip to The West Coast.

As I mentioned to Marty last year at the Bush dedication, someday in the near future I would like to do a presentation at your library.

I am grateful for all the support you and President Ford have shown for the Lisa Library!

Have a lovely Christmas Season!

With kind regards,
Sincerely,

Julie Eisenhauer

Dear Mrs. Ford,

A "little bird" -- Lee Annenberg -- told me yesterday that it is your birthday tomorrow. May I be among the first of your many friends and admirers to wish you a happy day!

It was a pleasure seeing your Jack and Susan at Lynda Robb's get-together this fall. My hope today is that on your birthday you are surrounded by your special family and your friends as you celebrate another milestone.

With affection, and with warm greetings to President Ford,
Sincerely,

April 7, 2003
