Religion and Watergate:
The Religious Faith and Practice of Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford

Author and historian
David L. Holmes shares his thoughts on the contrasting beliefs and practices of two men in a pivotal political period.

Winner of numerous teaching awards, David L. Holmes is Mason Professor of Religion Emeritus at the College of William & Mary.

“The Faiths of the Founding Fathers is exceptionally insightful [and] elegant.”
The New York Times

*“David Holmes made a wonderful presentation ... The Faiths of the Postwar Presidents is ... fascinating.”*
Tony Clark
Carter Presidential Library and Museum

In 1974, Gerald Ford was sworn into the Presidency amidst a flurry of religious statements.

He brought to office a strong religious background and no enemies list or concern for vengeance.

Free Admission. Free Parking.
