General Brent Scowcroft served as the National Security Advisor to both Presidents Gerald Ford and George H.W. Bush, and he is currently one of the country's leading experts on international policy.

This lecture is presented in conjunction with the opening of the Library's new exhibit "Art of Diplomacy: Head of State Gifts from the Ford Presidency."

This exhibit highlights the ceremonial side of diplomacy. It features gifts received by President Ford from visiting heads of state, elegant letters of credence presented by new ambassadors to the United States, and a look at the white tie dinner for Queen Elizabeth II.
