

Gerald R. Ford Presidential Library Presents:

Ready for Prime Time: Presidential Families and Television

To help open the new exhibit, "Prime Time Presidents," Steve Ford, son of President Gerald R. Ford, will discuss how First Families (especially his) navigate the bumpy road of constant media attention. Mr. Ford has appeared in countless television shows as well as over 30 major motion pictures including, "When Harry Met Sally" and "Armageddon."

Television's popularity changed the American presidency unlike any other innovation of the 20th century. Through documents, photographs, and video footage, "Prime Time Presidents" will showcase the ever-evolving relationship between television and the nation's Chief Executives, from Franklin Roosevelt to Bill Clinton. The exhibit will run from February 16 to August 15, 2006.
