Barry Werth

31 DAYS

“Barry Werth has written a crackling and instructive account of the tumultuous time when Gerald Ford moved into the Oval Office following the resignation of President Nixon. The power struggles, legal maneuvers, personality conflicts and big stakes all add up to a whodunit on a grand scale. I was there—and I was thrilled to make the trip again.”

Tom Brokaw of NBC News

This is the day-by-day story of the first month of the Ford administration. Mr. Werth describes how President Ford’s decisions were influenced by his own personal struggles and describes, in detail, behind-the-scene events when so many now familiar names were beginning their careers — George H.W. Bush, Donald Rumsfeld, and 33 year-old Richard Cheney.

Barry Werth is a journalist and the author of The Scarlet Professor which was a finalist for the National Book Critics Circle Award. His articles have appeared in The New Yorker, The New York Times Magazine, GQ, Outside, and other national magazines. He has taught journalism and nonfiction writing at Smith College, Mount Holyoke, and Boston University.
