Scope and Content Note

Frank G. Zarb was appointed as administrator of the Federal Energy Administration by President Ford in December 1974. He replaced John Sawhill, who resigned in October 1974 after conflicts over his support of an increased gasoline tax and mandatory energy conservation measures. Zarb, then serving as executive director of the newly created Energy Resources Council under Rogers C. B. Morton, Secretary of the Interior, and involved with a variety of energy-related issues, was deemed a logical choice to succeed Sawhill. In 1973, Zarb had assisted Treasury Secretary William Simon in organizing the Federal Energy Office, predecessor to the Federal Energy Administration, thus was familiar with its structure and function.

As executive director of the Energy Resources Council and administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, Zarb wielded considerable power over the nation's energy policies. The Energy Resources Council was charged with formulating energy policy proposals for the President and the coordination of the activities of the various federal agencies involved in energy matters. As administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, Zarb advised the President on all aspects of domestic and foreign energy policies and oversaw the price and regulatory operations of the agency.

The oil embargo in December 1973 had alerted the government of the need for planning on a national scale in the event of a similar situation arising in the future. One of Zarb's first tasks as administrator of FEA was to overhaul the program of fuel allocation to the states and insure that rationing measures could be introduced within ninety days of a crisis alert. He was also involved in the formulation of the energy proposals that the President presented to Congress in his State of the Union address on January 15, 1975. The plan called for higher taxes and prices for imported oil, the decontrolling of prices for imported oil, and the imposition of a windfall profits tax. It was Zarb's responsibility to try to achieve a compromise between the viewpoints of the administration and Congress. As the President's chief energy spokesman, Zarb appeared before congressional committees, at meetings of oil company executive and state energy officials, and traveled across the country with the President seeking support for administration policies.

This collection contains copies of Zarb's memoranda to the President, testimony before Congress and speeches to various organizations, a subject file, and scrapbook material. The papers document many of the energy issues facing the Ford administration and cover the period from December 1974 to January 1977, with a small amount of earlier and later material.

Frank Zarb's original gift of papers to the Gerald R. Ford Library was processed and made available for research in February 1982. The Library has received several small accretions and added them to the collection since then. In addition to the material described in this finding aid, the Library received several cartoon drawings from Mr. Zarb. These are now part of the artifact holdings at the Ford Presidential Museum.

Related Materials (January 2012)

Related materials in the Ford Library include the files of the U.S. Energy Resources Council and of several members of the Domestic Council including James Cannon, Michael Raoul-Duval, Glenn Schleede and Dennis Barnes. There are also energy-related materials in several White House Central Files categories and the files and papers of William Seidman. International energy policy and issues are documented in numerous sub-collections from National Security Advisers Kissinger and Scowcroft and the National Security Council staff.

Memoranda to the President, 1974-77.

(Boxes 1-3, 0.9 linear feet)

Memoranda to the President drafted by Zarb or members of his immediate staff, particularly John Hill and Eric Zausner. The memoranda include biweekly statistics concerning oil imports, domestic production, usage and conservation. Also included are proposals for meetings or telephone calls; talking points designed to aid the President in preparing for energy meetings; background material on a variety of energy-related topics; information on the progress of legislative initiatives; and early drafts of the President's energy messages. Major topics include: decontrol of oil prices, nuclear energy, production incentives, conversion to coal, the Alaska pipeline, liquified natural gas, windfall profits tax, conservation, divestiture and the price of oil imports. Zarb also provided the President with briefings on energy policy options as developed by the Energy Resources Council and talking points on energy to aid him in preparing for Cabinet meetings. Attached to several of Zarb's memoranda are Presidential responses. It is unclear whether or not this series of memoranda is complete. Arranged chronologically.

Subject File, 1974-78.

(Boxes 4-9, 1.8 linear feet)

Correspondence, primarily between Zarb and members of Congress or between Zarb and officials in government agencies; briefing materials on major legislation and aspects of the administration's energy program; Federal Energy Administration press releases and publications; copies of Zarb's column, "Energy Sense" and other articles written by and about him; newspaper clippings; and abstracts from the New York Times Information Bank of all the articles written about Zarb and the FEA during the Ford administration. Most of the correspondence with members of Congress consists of letters of appreciation Zarb received when he left the FEA in 1977. The Energy Resources Council material concerns the coal strike in 1974.

Arranged alphabetically by subject.
