Scope and Content Note

This collection mostly comprises White House letterhead memoranda submitted by National Security Advisers Henry Kissinger and Brent Scowcroft to President Ford on virtually a daily basis. These highly-classified memoranda are labeled "Information Items" and are usually two to three pages in length. They contain information and analysis on developments in various countries, international negotiations, important events, and high-level conversations and correspondence. Individual item-reports vary from a single paragraph to three-quarters of a page in length.

For the early weeks of the Ford presidency, State Department memoranda from the previous evening labeled "President's Evening Report" (usually a single page in length) are often attached to the National Security Adviser's memoranda. In later months these generally are not found. Also appearing in many folders, however, are two to three page memoranda from the Situation Room to the National Security Adviser labeled either “Information Items” or “Additional Information Items.” These apparently report on information received on evenings and weekends after the NSC staff had gone home.

The collection contains material touching on all major foreign affairs developments during the Ford administration, along with many lesser events. Along with frequent reports concerning long-term topics such as relations with the Soviet Union, foreign aid, the Cyprus crisis, Middle East developments, or the Vietnam War, researchers will discover scattered items on most countries.

The collection’s title derives from box titles applied by NSC staff at the end of the Ford administration. The collection has no known relationship to the “Presidential Daily Briefs” of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The White House Situation Room: Presidential Daily Briefings is one of many sub-collections that comprise the National Security Adviser Files. The provenance of the Ford National Security Adviser Files and an explanation of the designations “Presidential” and “Institutional” are provided in Appendix A.
