MELVIN R. LAIRD PAPERS, (1941) 1953-2004

Collection Type

Personal Papers

Extent

132 linear feet (ca. 264,000 pages), 224 microfilm cartridges, 7 microfilm reels, and 4 oversize volumes.

Record Type

Textual

Access

Access is governed by the Laird deed of gift and NARA policies. Currently, boxes A1 to A146 are open to research upon demand (although individual documents may still be restricted under NARA or donor restrictions). All other boxes fall into one of two status categories: (1) those that require advance consultation so that archivists may complete review of requested folders; and (2) those that are closed pending completion of systematic review for declassification. Please ask our reference staff for details. Since the initial processing of the collection in 2005, the Library has received 7.5 feet of additional papers which are unprocessed and not available for research.

Copyright

Melvin Laird has donated to the United States of America his copyrights in all of his unpublished writings in National Archives collections, excepting memoir drafts. The copyrights to materials written by other individuals or organizations are presumed to remain with them. Works prepared by U.S. Government employees as part of their official duties are in the public domain.

Biography

Melvin R. Laird

September 1, 1922 - Born, Omaha, Nebraska - His father, mother, and maternal grandfather all held political offices in Wisconsin.

1942 - B.A., Carleton College

1942-46 - U.S. Navy - Laird served in six battles on the destroyer Maddox in Task Force 58 and the Pacific Third Fleet, and he was twice wounded

1945 - He married Barbara Masters. They had four children: John O. Laird, Allison Laird-Large, David Laird, and Kimberly Dalglish.

1946-52 - Wisconsin State Senator - He was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his father, the former senator.

1952-1968 - U.S. House of Representatives - He served on the House Appropriations Committee, developing an expertise in defense matters and health care. He also became one of the leading critics of President Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam War policy and Robert McNamara's management of the Department of Defense.

1962 - Author of A House Divided, which called for a strong anti-Communist position around the globe.

1964 - Editor of The Conservative Papers, a compilation of 14 essays by leading conservatives.

1964 - Chairman of the Republican Platform Committee - He led the effort to develop the party platform for the 1964 presidential election.

1965-1969 - Chairman, Republican Conference of the House of Representatives - He developed the conference into a more active body, calling frequent meetings and setting up task forces to study party positions.

1968 - Editor of The Republican Papers, a compilation of essays stating Republican positions on various campaign issues.

1969-1973 - Secretary of Defense - Among his accomplishments were a close relationship with Congress on defense programs, increased decentralized participatory decisionmaking (which helped win the support of military leaders for necessary reforms), the development of "Vietnamization" (the gradual disengagement of American combat troops from the war), and the creation of the all-volunteer Army.

1973-1974 - Counsellor to the President for Domestic Affairs, White House

1974- Senior counselor for national and international affairs, Reader's Digest. In addition, he has supported the work of the Melvin R. Laird Center (a medical research and education facility) at the Marshfield Clinic in Marshfield, WI. He has also performed distinguished service on the boards of directors of about a dozen companies and been active on some 27 non-profit organizations. Over the years he has received over 300 awards and honorary degrees.

December 2005 - Wrote article in Foreign Affairs magazine titled "Iraq: Learning the Lessons of Vietnam."

November 16, 2016 - Died, Fort Myers, Florida

Scope and Content Note

Melvin R. Laird, Jr. was born in Omaha, Nebraska, but grew up in the town of Marshfield in central Wisconsin where his family moved when he was a year old. His family had deep roots in Wisconsin politics and business, with both of his parents and his maternal grandfather all holding elective office. After his father's death in 1946, Laird ran for his father's seat in the state senate, becoming the youngest senator in Wisconsin history. In November 1952, the voters of Wisconsin's 7th congressional district (covering ten counties in the middle of the state) elected him to the U. S. House of Representatives. He was re-elected eight times, serving until January 1969.

A very energetic congressman, Laird became known for his work on both domestic and defense issues. His long-time service on the Defense subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee throughout most of the 1950s and 1960s allowed him to develop an extraordinary expertise on defense issues. Laird supported a strong defense posture and was frequently critical of Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara's management and decision making practices and the Johnson administration's handling of the Vietnam War. During much of his service on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, he sat side-by-side with Representative Gerald Ford and they became close life-long friends.

Laird's position on the House Appropriations subcommittee handling health matters allowed him to play a key congressional role on many medical and health issues.

He often teamed up with liberal Democrat John Fogarty of Rhode Island to pass key legislation on education or health matters. Their impact on the National Institutes of Health was pivotal in a vast expansion of health research programs and facilities. They also sponsored the buildup of the National Library of Medicine, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, the National Environmental Center in North Carolina, and the nation's eight National Cancer Centers. Laird received many awards for his work on health matters, including the Albert Lasker Medical Research Award and the American Public Health Association award for leadership.

Over time, Laird became one of the most influential Republicans in the House. As Chairman of the Platform Committee for the 1964 Republican National Convention, he played a key role in the development of the party platform. In December 1964, Laird was one of the "Young Turks" who engineered the election of Gerald Ford as Republican Minority Leader of the House. He then succeeded Ford as chairman of the House Republican Conference, an organization consisting of all of the Republican members of the House. In this position, he created task forces to study issues and formulate legislative proposals. He and Ford worked closely to develop Republican alternatives to the programs and policies of the Johnson administration.

Laird also authored or edited three books during these years: A House Divided (1962), The Conservative Papers (1964), and The Republican Papers (1968). These further elevated his prominence in Republican circles. Indeed, by 1968, the National Committee for an Effective Congress termed Laird the "most powerful Republican in the House."

Soon after the 1968 presidential election, president-elect Richard M. Nixon nominated Laird to become Secretary of Defense. Laird was the first member of Congress to occupy that position. Although not a close confidant of the President, Laird was an influential Secretary. He achieved a smooth association with the military leadership by restoring some of the responsibilities they had lost during the 1960s. His excellent relations with Congress enabled him to gain approval for many of his programs and budget requests. One of his accomplishments was the institution of the draft lottery to make the draft more fair. He later oversaw the ending of the draft and the establishment of the All-Volunteer Force. Other accomplishments included the withdrawal of all combat personnel from Vietnam and establishing the Total Force Concept that made the National Guard and Reserve Forces an integral part of U.S. total military manpower planning. In spite of the divisive Vietnam War and the unfolding Watergate affair, which threatened to discredit the entire Nixon administration, Laird retired with his reputation intact at the beginning of the second Nixon term in January 1973.

Several years after he left office, the members of the Washington Press Corps who covered national security and defense issues voted Laird the best Secretary of Defense in the history of the Department. They cited his leadership in arms control, improved procurement policy, promotion of women (for the first time) to flag rank, and the fact that Laird never lost a vote on Capitol Hill.

Laird left the Department of Defense early in 1973 to pursue opportunities in the private sector, but less than six months later President Nixon asked him to join the White House staff as Counsellor to the President for Domestic Affairs. The unraveling of the Watergate affair had already led to the loss of several top White House aides, so President Nixon needed to replace them with highly respected individuals who were not implicated in the scandal. Laird agreed to help out, but only on a short term basis. He worked mainly on legislative matters and domestic issues. Laird strongly lobbied President Nixon to appoint Gerald Ford to the vacancy created by Vice President Spiro Agnew's resignation in October 1973.

One of Laird's key aides throughout much of his tenure in government was William J. Baroody, Jr. Baroody joined the Laird congressional staff in 1961 and assisted with a variety of public affairs, writing, legislative, and other tasks. During Laird's service as Secretary of Defense, Baroody continued in a similar role, but also participated in the Department's long-range planning. When Laird left the government in early 1973, Baroody transferred to the Nixon White House, assuming many of Charles Colson's former roles in public affairs and liaison with interest groups. When Laird joined the White House staff six months later, Baroody again functioned as his deputy. Baroody remained in the White House after Laird's departure, serving until 1977.

In February 1974, Laird left the White House to become senior counselor for national and international affairs for Reader's Digest, a position he was to hold for many years. During this time after leaving government service, he also served on the boards of many companies and was active in many charitable causes.

Laird established the Laird Youth Leadership Foundation in 1964. This organization still provides college scholarships and holds biennial Youth Leadership Day Conferences to bring together Wisconsin high school students and policy experts to discuss public policy issues. Another long-standing activity is his work with and support of the Marshfield Clinic and the associated Marshfield Medical Research Foundation in his hometown. The Clinic was, in 2006, one of the largest private multispecialty group practices in the U.S.

Collection Provenance

The core of the Laird Papers is material that Mr. Laird created and retained without interruption until donating them to the Ford Library in installments beginning in 2001. In addition, however, the Laird Papers include extensive files accumulated by William J. Baroody, Jr., while he worked on Mr. Laird's staff in the 1960s and 1970s. These latter materials were in Mr. Baroody's physical custody at the time of his death in 1996. In 1997, son William J. Baroody III transferred these materials to Mr. Laird, who later donated them to the Ford Library as part of the Laird Papers. At approximately the same time, the younger Mr. Baroody donated to the Ford Library his late father's papers as a senior adviser to President Ford and then as head of the American Enterprise Institute. These comprise a separate collection, the William J. Baroody, Jr., Papers. The division of these materials was imperfect, owing to their exceptional volume and complexity. Some errant files can be found in each.

Scope and Content of the Laird Papers

The collection contains extensive documentation on many aspects of Mr. Laird's government service and post-government career. There are about 20 linear feet and 24 microfilms dating from Laird's congressional years, nearly 60 linear feet and 66 microfilms from the Department of Defense period, 13.5 linear feet and part of a scrapbook from the Nixon White House, and about 32 linear feet and four scrapbooks from the post-government period.

Ford Library archivists arranged the collection in increments, as each major accession was received. They did this to expedite release of the collection. This decision, plus the inherent complexity of the collection, is the basis for the overall order of file series comprising the collection.

Regarding Mr. Laird's earliest years, the collection contains a small amount of material on his service in the Navy in World War II and later in the Naval Reserve, the microfilm of an early scrapbook, and some information among the interviews and research materials for a Laird memoir (see below for more about this book).

Microfilm of speeches, press releases, voting records in Congress, weekly columns, newsletters, and scrapbooks document Mr. Laird's congressional career from 1953-1969. The Ford Library does not have the originals of these documents. They appear to be part of the Laird Papers at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

The bulk of material in paper form begins in 1961, when William Baroody, Jr., joined Mr. Laird's congressional staff. Much of this material from 1961 to 1964 focuses on special writing projects - Laird books, articles, speeches, and press releases. Extensive materials from 1964 document Laird's work as chairman of the Republican Party platform committee and Baroody's issues-research for Senator Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign.

Materials from 1965 to 1968 are much broader in scope, although continuing to include public affairs and writing projects. The change comes with Laird's election as chairman of the House Republican Conference and his emergence as one of the key Republican spokesmen on defense and national security matters. More of the papers concern defense issues (defense budget, Vietnam War, etc.), domestic issues (especially revenue sharing and health issues), the House Republican Conference, and various Republican Party organizations.

Materials from the Department of Defense years (1969-73) are quite extensive. Portions are open to research, but very many documents still bear national security classification markings and await declassification review (March 2005). Ford Library staff have digitized these classified documents and referred the digital copies to reviewers in Washington. As material becomes declassified through either systematic review or mandatory declassification review requests, Library staff open them.

Particularly important from the Defense Department period is a large series known as the "Historical Project Files." It contains thousands of documents on many leading national security issues. A special team of aides photocopied them from Secretary Laird's official files in the closing months of his service. The aides arranged the copied documents by topic and thereunder chronologically. They numbered each document and created "calendars" that give a full citation for every document under each topic. The Historical Project File will, as parts become declassified, become a major resource for information on the key issues that Secretary Laird faced during his Cabinet service.

Various other Defense-era subject files concern Laird's transition from Congress to the Department of Defense, departmental administration, Laird and Baroody public activities, relations with Congress, long-range planning for the Department, and national security issues facing the Nixon administration. Some series contain Department staff meeting minutes, Laird's speeches and congressional testimony, and briefing memoranda for daily press briefings.

These Defense series are not always complete. Many chronologically-arranged sequences cover only for the first two or three years and are missing the last year or so (some of the missing material appears in a separate Ford Library collection - the William J. Baroody Papers). The collection contains microfilms covering the Department of Defense years, but these are copies of material that appears in other series.

The Nixon White House series concern Baroody's work as a presidential assistant and also Laird's brief role as Counsellor to the President. In addition to materials concerning liaison with interest groups (which gradually became Baroody's primary responsibility), the papers from early 1973 concern his work as a successor to Charles Colson in heading up the White House "Attack Group," comprised of staff members who met daily to plan how to deal with Nixon White House enemies. His files on this topic contain material not only from 1973, but also some folders turned over to him by Colson dating back to 1969. Another well-documented role from early 1973 involved what was known as the "Battle of the Budget" (trying to organize support for President Nixon's budget proposals).

Baroody served as Laird's deputy during the period when both were on the White House staff, so the collection contains numerous memoranda between the two. The collection also documents many of Laird's speeches and public events. After Laird's departure from the White House staff, one of Baroody's jobs was to organize support for President Nixon in his battle to avoid impeachment. The collection contains the ribbon copies (stamped "The President has seen") of progress reports to the President on this "Impeachment Support Program".

Materials from the post-government period include correspondence, trips and events files, organizations files, and Laird interviews, articles, and statements. Many files reflect Laird's work for the Reader's Digest. Although no longer a government official, as a former Secretary of Defense he was frequently asked for his opinion on national security and defense matters and participated in conferences with other former Secretaries. In addition he worked with the American Enterprise Institute on studies of various issues.

Two post-government series contain interviews, chapter drafts, and miscellaneous background and research materials for a planned Laird memoir that remains in progress. Journalist and author Dale Van Atta conducted the interviews with Secretary Laird and his friends and colleagues and has assisted with the memoir. These two series will not be available for research until after the book is published.

Finally, the collection also contains small and fragmentary series concerning William Baroody's later work in the Ford White House and the American Enterprise Institute. Researchers will find much more extensive files from these time periods in the William J. Baroody Papers or the William J. Baroody Files - two other Ford Library collections.

Related Materials (June 2006)

The most closely related collection in the Ford Library is the William J. Baroody Papers. Parts of that collection concern his work in the Laird congressional office, the Department of Defense and the Nixon and Ford White House. The Library also holds the William J. Baroody Files, which came to the Library in 1977 as part of the Ford presidential papers and solely concerns Baroody's work in the Ford White House.

Researchers interested in Mr. Laird's congressional years will find related materials on the House Republican leadership and many other topics in the Gerald Ford Congressional Papers and the Robert Hartmann Papers. The Robert Peabody Interviews focus on the House Republican leadership in the 1960s.

An important, complementary, collection of Melvin Laird papers can be found at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin's Stevens Point Area Research Center. That collection focuses almost exclusively on Laird's early life and congressional years, although it does include a small quantity of papers from the time that he served as Secretary of Defense (these are mostly personal rather than official in nature). A copy of the finding aid to this collection is in the Melvin Laird folder of the Ford Library Vertical File. Some series from the Stevens Point collection are available on microfilm in the Ford Library collection.

Another collection of Laird materials, primarily scrapbooks and memorabilia, can be found at the Melvin R. Laird Center, a world-class medical research and education facility of the Marshfield Clinic, in Laird's hometown of Marshfield, Wisconsin.

Congressional Papers: Baroody Subject File, (1958) 1961-1968.

(Boxes A1-A19, 7.4 linear feet)

Correspondence, memoranda, draft magazine articles, reports, notes, press releases, speeches, speech drafts, manuals, pamphlets, and clippings. Defense and national security matters (especially the defense budget and the Vietnam War) are a major topic, but other folders concern Laird speeches and articles, the 1968 presidential campaign (especially the Nelson Rockefeller campaign for the Republican nomination), the House Republican Conference, other Republican Party organizations, and issues being discussed by Congress. Some additional materials from this time period appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

(Boxes A19-A27, 3.3 linear feet)

Correspondence, statements, biographies, platform drafts, lists, proceedings transcripts, reports, working papers, and press releases. Laird served as chairman of the platform committee and Baroody assisted him. The file concerns all aspects of the development of the platform -- organizing the committee, conducting hearings, developing a draft platform, and finalizing it. Some additional materials on this topic appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

Arranged alphabetically by subject.

Congressional Papers: Baroody 1964 Presidential Campaign File, 1964.

(Boxes A27-A32, 2.1 linear feet)

Campaign materials, press releases, briefing books, and voting records. Some material relates to the campaigns by Nelson Rockefeller and William Scranton to obtain the Republican nomination, but the bulk of the series concerns the campaign of Barry Goldwater. Baroody took a leave of absence from Laird's staff to work on the Goldwater campaign during the general election. Much of the series consists of research folders on specific issues documenting Goldwater's past views and actions. Some additional materials on this topic appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

Arranged alphabetically by subject.

Congressional Papers: Baroody File on Laird Books, 1960-1968.

(Boxes A40-A49, 4.0 linear feet)

Book drafts, correspondence with publishers and authors of individual chapters, and galley proofs. Laird published three books in this time period - A House Divided, Conservative Papers, and Republican Papers. The first was a statement of Laird's views. The other two were compilations of papers by various authors presenting alternatives to the policies of President Lyndon Johnson's administration. Some additional materials on these books appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

Arranged by book and thereunder alphabetically by subject.

Nixon White House Papers: Baroody Subject File, (1969) 1973-1974.

(Boxes A128-A142, 5.8 linear feet)

Memoranda to Melvin Laird and Richard Nixon, correspondence, reports, notes, schedule proposals, speech materials, and newspaper clippings. The materials document White House liaison with interest groups, the role of the White House "Attack Group" (including early Nixon administration documents inherited from Charles Colson), the 1973 "Battle of the Budget", Baroody's work as an assistant to White House Counsellor Mel Laird, the White House "Impeachment Support Program", and economic and energy matters. Some additional materials from this time period appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

Arranged alphabetically by subject and chronologically thereunder.

Nixon White House Papers: Baroody White House Staff Memoranda, 1973-1974.

(Boxes A146-A154, 3.6 linear feet)

Memoranda to and from other members of the White House staff. The memos cover many aspects of the work of the second Nixon administration, although the focus is on the areas in which Baroody was most involved - especially liaison with interest groups. The largest files are for Ken Clawson, H.R. Haldeman, Dick Howard, Jerry Jones, Bruce Kehrli, Dave Parker, and Dave Wimer. Some additional White House staff memoranda appear in the William J. Baroody Papers, another Ford Library collection.

Arranged alphabetically by name of the staff member and chronologically thereunder.

Department of Defense Papers: Historical Project Files, 1969-1972.

(Boxes C1-C42, 16.8 linear feet)

Memoranda, correspondence, talking papers, briefing papers, and lists. This series was copied from Laird's official files by a special team of staff members late in his term as Secretary of Defense in order to document the key issues he handled. Topics include: all-volunteer force, Cambodia, chemical/biological warfare research, drug abuse in the military, EC-121 (a Navy aircraft shot down by North Korea), equal opportunity and race relations, F-15 procurement, Indo-China, Japan, Korea, Laos, MIRV (including A-X/Close Air Support), MK-48 Torpedo, Middle East and Israel, NATO, POW/MIA, People's Republic of China, Procurement, SALT, Safeguard ABM, Shipbuilding, Strategy of Realistic Deterrence, Taking Stock of the Department, Thailand, and Vietnam (especially the Vietnam War).

Arranged alphabetically by topic and chronologically thereunder, with itemized document lists ("calendars") at the start of each topic.

Microfilms (Unclassified), (1941) 1953-1973.

(Boxes D101-D108, 168 cartridges and 7 reels)

Microfilm copies of selected files documenting the various public aspects of Laird's congressional career and his service as Secretary of Defense. Included for the congressional years are copies of his speeches, press releases, voting record in Congress, weekly columns, newsletters, scrapbooks, and publications. From his Department of Defense years, the series includes speeches and public statements, daily press briefings, daily calendars, scrapbooks, and several reports and lists. The scrapbooks include some material predating Mr. Laird's career in Congress. With two exceptions, the Ford Library does not have the originals. These two exceptions are the Department of Defense speeches and public statements (1969-1971 only) in boxes A105-A114 and the daily press briefings ("News Items of Special Interest") in boxes A118-A128. The Laird Papers held by the State Historical Society of Wisconsin appear to contain many other originals. In addition to the 85 cartridges and 7 reels of positive microfilm, the Ford Library has negative microfilm for all but two cartridges. Arranged numerically by cartridge number.

Microfilms (Classified), 1969-1972.

(Boxes D109-D111, 56 cartridges)

Microfilm copies of many of the most significant files concerning Laird's service as Secretary of Defense, including his staff meeting minutes and special documents on various issues that were copied to help document his time as Secretary of Defense. The originals of the documents on these films appear in other series in this collection - especially in boxes C1-C43 and D12-D19 (although some scattered folders from other boxes are included). In addition to the 28 cartridges of positive microfilm, the Ford Library has negative microfilms of each cartridge. Arranged numerically by cartridge number.
