FOREWORD

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approves he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill. The Constitution of the United States of America, Article I, Section 7, clauses 2 & 3.

Despite the fact that the word "veto" does not appear in the above section nor elsewhere in the Constitution, it is almost impossible to overestimate its importance in our republican form of government. As James Bryce points out in "The American Commonwealth" (new ed., 1910, vol. 1, p. 225):

The strength of Congress consists in the right to pass statutes; the strength of the President in his right to veto them.

For the purposes of this publication, the term "veto" is used to indicate the action of the President when he disapproves of a bill or joint resolution, with his objections thereto, and returns it to the house in which it originated. A pocket veto is a bill that failed without the President's signature to become law at the expiration of 10 days because the Congress adjourned during that period.

If the originating body does not take action or fails to override the veto, no action can be taken by the other body. However, if the veto is overridden by the originating body, the proceedings of the other body to which the veto is then sent must be examined for final disposition of the legislation. When both bodies override the veto, the bill becomes law without the signature of the President.

Further information with regard to subsequent action on each vetoed bill may be found in the proceedings of the body in which the bill was originally introduced as published in the Annals of Congress (1st Cong., 1st sess., through 18th Cong., 1st sess., 1789-1824), Register of Debates (18th Cong., 2d sess., through 25th Cong., 1st sess., 1824-1837), Congressional Globe (23d Cong., 1st sess., through 42d Cong., 3d sess., 1833-1873), Congressional Record (43d Cong., 1st sess., through 90th Cong., 2d sess., 1873 to 1968) and in the journals of the Senate and House of Representatives.

This record of the Presidential vetoes of legislation enacted by the Congress is intended as an aid in the study of the relationship existing between the executive and legislative branches of government, including our system of checks and balances. The material contained herein is arranged chronologically by Congresses and the administrations in which the vetoes occurred. The document number of each veto message is included in parentheses following the title of the bill or resolution. The list includes vetoes and any action taken thereon from the First through the Ninetieth Congresses (1789-1968). When sessions of a Congress are omitted from this tabulation it is correct to assume that no vetoes were recorded during those sessions. A numerical summary of bills vetoed by each President since the beginning of our present form of government is given on page V. The figures include regular and pocket vetoes of both public and private bills.

A comprehensive study of the Presidential veto power, including its historical background, is contained in a committee print of the House Committee on the Judiciary (1951) entitled "The Veto Power of the President" by Charles J. Zinn, law revision counsel. See also "The Veto Power" by Edward C. Mason (Harvard Historical Monographs No. 1, 1890); "Veto Messages of the Presidents of the United States," compiled by Ben: Perley Poore (S. Misc. Doc. No. 53, 49th Cong., 2d sess.), Government Printing Office, 1886; and "Report on Pocket Veto," a memorandum prepared in the Office of the Attorney General (H. Doc. No. 493, 70th Cong., 2d sess.), 1928.

For the purpose of this publication, the term "veto" is used to indicate the action of the President when he disapproves of a bill or joint resolution with his objections thereto, and returns it to the house in which it originated. A pocket veto is a bill that failed without the President's signature to become law at the expiration of 10 days because the Congress adjourned during that period. If the originating body does not take action or fails to override the veto, an action can be taken by the other body. However, if the veto is overridden by the originating body, the proceedings of the other body to which the veto is then sent must be examined for final disposition of the legislation. When both bodies override the veto, the bill becomes law without the signature of the President.

Further information with regard to subsequent action on each vetoed bill may be found in the proceedings of the body in which the bill was originally introduced as published in the Annals of Congress (1st Cong., 1st sess., through 18th Cong., 1st sess., 1789-1824), Register of Debates (18th Cong., 2d sess., through 25th Cong., 1st sess., 1824-1837), Congressional Globe (23d Cong., 1st sess., through 43d Cong., 3d sess., 1833-1873), Congressional Record (43d Cong., 1st sess., through

President Taft vetoed H.R. 24023, because it provided for a tenure of 7 years for persons employed in the classified civil service at Washington and the abolition of the Commerce Court. An identical act (H.R. 26321), except for the tenure of office, was passed by both Houses and presented to the President, who vetoed this second bill in the following message:
To the House of Representatives:
I return herewith H.R. 26321, an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, and for other purposes," without my approval because the bill still contains in section 9 a provision for the repeal of the act establishing the Commerce Court.
My objections to this repeal are stated in my message returning without my approval H.R. 24023 communicated to the House of Representatives on August 15 last.
WM. H. TAFT.

H.R. 7629—To amend the penal laws of the United States (H. Doc. 802).

The Speaker laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States which was read:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith without my signature H.R. 7629, entitled "An act to amend the penal laws of the United States." I direct attention to the fact that in embodying in the present amendatory act the opening portion of existing section 245 of the Criminal Code an obvious error has occurred. The phrase "to any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, or place noncontiguous to but subject to the jurisdiction thereof" which immediately follows the words "jurisdiction thereof" in line 12, should be taken out of its present position and inserted immediately after the words "jurisdiction thereof" in line 10. I have had the change definitely indicated by appropriate pencil marks.

WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. BLANTON. There is nothing improper in the President of the United States correcting the English of the House or Senate, is there?

Mr. WALSH. Not at all; not when their English is incorrect.

The House accepted the President's suggestions, and H.R. 14384 was passed in lieu of the original bill (59 Cong. Rec., p. 8280).

DISAPPROVALS (POCKETED)

Shortly after the adjournment of the Seventy-third Congress, first session, on June 18, 1934, the White House issued the following statement relative to the action taken by the President on certain bills upon which the time limit for action did not expire until after the adjournment of the session, viz:

In the past, it has been customary in most cases involving vetoes, for the President to withhold his signature, thereby, in effect, allowing the bill to die without becoming a law.

The President has desired, however, to take a more affirmative position than this, feeling that in the case of most legislation, reasons for definite disapproval should be given. Therefore, he has written on the copy of each bill the words "Disapproved and signature withheld" and has appended, in every case, a brief statement giving the reason or reasons for disapproval.—White House statement, June 26, 27, 28, 29, 1934.

The numbers and titles of the bills disapproved by the President are as follows (see Senate Journal, 73d Cong., 2d sess., pp. 640-643, for the President's reasons for disapproval):

VETO MESSAGES RECEIVED FROM THE PRESIDENT DURING RECESS

The Vice President laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Senate, which was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, May 7, 1936.

HON. JOHN N. GARNER,
President of the Senate.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: On Friday, April 24, 1936, the Committee on Enrolled Bills of the Senate presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bills (S. 713) granting jurisdiction of the Court of Claims to hear the case of David A. Wright and (S. 929) for the relief of the Southern Products Co., which had passed both Houses of Congress and been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate.

The Senate, at 3:25 p.m., Monday, May 4, 1936, took a recess until 12 noon on Thursday, May 7, 1936.

During the interim the President of the United States sent by messenger two messages addressed to the Senate, each dated May 5, 1936, giving his reasons for not approving, respectively, Senate bill 713 and Senate bill 929. The Senate not being in session on the last day which the President had for the return of these bills under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, in order to protect the interests of the Senate so that it might have the opportunity to reconsider the bills, I accepted the messages, and I now present to you the President's veto messages, with the accompanying papers, for disposition by the Senate.

Sincerely yours,

EDWIN A. HALSEY,
Secretary of the Senate.

H.R. 3233—To repeal certain acts of Congress (pocket-vetoed). (H. Doc. 828).

"The bill under consideration proposes to repeal all bills that have been pocket vetoed after any adjournment of a session of the Congress other than the final session of a Congress. Manifestly, such legislation would have far-reaching implications, because it would assume that all such bills became law and that the President has no authority to exercise a pocket veto at any time except after a final adjournment of a Congress. The result would be to place a limitation on the pocket-veto power which, in the light of long and continuous usage and the decisions of the Supreme Court, was not contemplated by the founding fathers." (Excerpt from veto message.)
